WASHINGTON.

Another Day of Idle Talk in the Senate on Virginia.

THE VOTE TO BE TAKEN TO-DAY.

A New Postal Telegraph Bill Introduced.

Energetic Reply of Mr. Scofield to Mr. Dawes, in the House.

Mr. Wells' Revenue Report Under Discussion.

PROTECTION VS. FREE TRADE

With Another Solemn Debate Before the Committees Committee—New Census Bill in the Senate—Debate for Improving Our Harbors—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The debate on the admission of Virginia in the Senate to-day was more diffuse and unimportant in whatever view the subject is regarded, than any discussion which has taken place in that body for a long time. Tired, apparently, of debating about the biography of Governor WALKER, wearied of reading anonymous letters and telegrams, the body devoted itself to a rambling discussion on the powers of the General Government over the States. Finally, at about 6 o'clock, the friends of the bill forced its opponents to an agreement to vote to-morrow at 4 o'clock on the whole subject. The House bill will pass without doubt as amended by Senator EDMUNDS. In this the House will concur, though BUTLER, it is said, desires to have it back into committee.

THE CENSUS.

The Senate, as your correspondent has already intimated, is apparently determined to strangle the census. Senator CONKLING's committee have smothered the bill upon which the House bestowed so much labor, and to-day Mr. CONKLING reported a bill of half a dozen lines, simply enacting that the census should be taken under the old system, and authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to make such changes in the schedules as the late amendments of the Constitution require. This revives the old Marshalship system with all its imperfections. It is difficult to determine the motives which actuate the Senators in their opposition. It would be ungenerous, perhaps, to say that Senators look upon the bill with distaste, because it gives members of the House a chance to secure the appointment of a certain number of officers in each Congressional District, but it is nevertheless true that there are Senators who are not above such selfish feeling. It may be, however, a feeling of economy; but if it is, it is of the most ephemeral kind, and only crops out at long intervals in the Senate. The result will probably be that the question will finally get into a Committee of Conference of the two Houses, where something will be evolved, the nature of which it is now impossible to predict.

MR. WELLS' REPORT IN THE HOUSE.

The high tariff party have met with their first signal defeat, and it may be accepted as an indication of what is in store for the efforts to maintain the present incongruous and burdensome tariff system. Mr. LAFLIN, Chairman of the Committee on Printing, reported back the Senate joint resolution to print 5,000 copies of Commissioner WELLS' report, for the use of the Senate, and 12,000 copies for the use of the House. He made a short and eloquent speech in its favor, and was followed by his colleagues on the Committee, Mr. CAKE, who, though opposed to the report, would print this one, because it was the last. Then followed a very general and spicy discussion, lasting nearly two hours, in which Dyer, Maynard, McCarthy, Kelley, Butler and Bailey spoke against printing, and Laflin, Brooks, Mungen, Randall, Hay, Garfield, Marshall, Peters, Logan, Stevenson and Moore, of Illinois, spoke in favor of printing. The chief speeches made against the resolution were by MAYNARD, who seems to grow narrower and more bigoted with every session; McCARTHY, whose sole interest inspired him to compare Mr. WELLS with BENEDICT ARNOLD, and Mr. KELLEY, who is the most earnest, most consistent and most industrious of the high tariff advocates. BUTLER cavilled at some of the statistics of the report, and voted against printing it, but he believes in the report, nevertheless. On ordering the previous question the vote stood 132 to 61, and the monopolists had not the courage to demand the yeas and nays on its passage. Mr. LAFLIN closed in an eloquent speech, and the bill passed without a division.

NEGRO SUFFRAGE IN TENNESSEE.

Advices received here from Nashville state that the Franchise Committee of the Tennessee State Convention, have reported an article guaranteeing the right of suffrage to the colored men of the State; and the probability is that it will be adopted.

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

The Ways and Means Committee this morning had before them a delegation representing the hide and leather interest of the country. The following gentlemen connected with this interest are in the city, though they were not all present to-day: S. R. Spaulding, W. B. Spooner, and Chauncey Coon, of Boston; Mr. Pomeroy, of Cincinnati; G.W. Allen, of Milwaukee, and O. L. Grant, of Chicago. Mr. ALLEN presented the case in favor of the abrogation of the duty upon hides, and made the following points in favor of the demand.

First—That leather and the manufacturers of leather, boots and shoes, harness, saddlery, belting, &c., compose now, next to agriculture, the largest industrial interest in the country, employing more capital and labor than any other save that. Second—That before the war there existed a large export trade of leather to Europe, and of the manufactures of leather to South America; that trade is now gone to Canada and European countries. Third—That this is owing to two causes, one of which, the high price of leather, affects everything; and a duty of ten per cent in gold on all imported hides. The Canadian manufacturer, paying no duty on hides and no internal manufacturer or sales tax, are enabled to produce leather at prices that drive American manufacturers from all the markets of the world save our own. Fourth—Foreign hides and domestic hides do not actually enter into competition with each other, not being interchangeable in the manufacture of leather save to a very limited extent. South American hides make our greatest staple, hemlock sole leather. This forms ninety-seven to ninety-eight per cent of all the kind of leather made in this country. Domestic hides are used principally for harness and upper leather stocks. The Treasury, therefore, would not materially affect the domestic hide; and, by being enabled to export the manufactures of sole leather, it would necessarily increase the demand for and consumption of upper leather, thereby increasing the production and increasing largely the revenue of the country. Fifth—That, while the price of domestic hides may or may not be reduced by the exemption of foreign hides from duty, the farmer, who now possibly is obliged to take fifty cents less on the hide he produces, will, for every such reduction, receive in return a reduction in the product of the hide, which he consumes of 25 to 50 per cent, in the manufacture of shoes, greater than his production of the raw material. That the great Surplus of hides is from the Southwestern States, Texas principally; and that, if there is any loss by the abrogation of the duty, it will fall upon those raisers or the middle men who trade and speculate in cattle.

Mr. ALLEN added, at the request of the Committee, that the cause which produced these results was the fact that the average price of green salted hides in the Eastern markets for the past three years has been thirteen to thirteen and a half cents per pound, against seven and a half cents for three years before the war. This, with the high price of labor, was a sufficient answer to the inquiry. Members of the Committee state that the presentation of the case by Mr. ALLEN was very terse and forcible.

DECISION IN A KNOTTY CASE.

An officer of the army, while changing station, lost a part of his baggage. It appears that the property lost was duly delivered by the Quartermaster to the officers of the steamer at Savannah, Ga., but that on her arrival at Jacksonville, Fla., a portion of the same was missing. The steamer was regularly employed by the Quartermaster's Department. Upon these facts the Quartermaster at Savannah recommended that the Government commence suit against the owners of the steamer for the loss, and the Quartermaster-General, in transmitting the account, with vouchers of the lost articles to the Treasury, presented the question whether the Government or the officer should prosecute the matters. The Second Comptroller, in a review of the case, said: "From the evidence presented it appears that the Government is not indebted for transportation service to the owners of the steamer. Were it otherwise the Quartermaster's Department would be justified, I think, in retaining in its custody any money due the owners for such service, not by way of set-off but to await the judgment of a Court in a suit brought by either party, (the owner of the steamer bringing suit for service in the Court of Claims and the Quartermaster's Department a cross action for loss of chattels, while in transitu by the carrier.) But the fact being, as already stated, that there is nothing due from the United States to the carriers for services performed, may the Quartermaster's Department properly commence an action against the owners of the steamer for the loss of the personal effects of the officer? Army Regulations, Par. 1,687, provide that officers' baggage shall not exceed (mess chest and all personal effects included) a certain number of pounds—the enumeration is given for all grades of officers. There does not appear to be any question raised in objection to the right of the officer to transportation under this regulation, and it also appears that the custom and practice of the Quartermaster's Department under the regulation were strictly observed in the case of the order for the transportation in the present case.

An officer of the Quartermaster's Department, moreover, contracted with the steamer, and paid for the transportation. These facts, therefore, bring the case within the application of the legal rule, that for any default on the part of the carrier, not one of the excepted perils of common law, he shall be answerable to the shipper. It would follow as the corollary of this principle that the officer of the Quartermaster's Department who delivered the baggage to the carrier, or in his absence his principal, the Quartermaster-General, should bring an action against the master or owners of the steamer for the non-performance of the contract on the part of the latter. Since, however, no appropriation can, from the nature of the case, receive any benefit from the prosecution of a suit as above mentioned, the question of payment for professional services which might be rendered is conditional, to wit: can they legally be paid from the contingencies of the War Department? In this view of the case the only question to be decided relates to the necessity of employing counsel and the amount to be paid for their services—a subject matter, in my opinion, properly to be decided by the Secretary of War.

THE GOLD INVESTIGATION.

The Banking and Currency Committee continued their investigation this morning by the examination of C. J. OSBORN and a Mr. BOCOCK, both of whom were brokers for the gold clique, and testified to their employment by the Ring, for the purpose of buying gold for them. FISK and GOULD will be here on Saturday.

AMERICAN OCEAN STEAMSHIP LINES.

A prominent Western member of Congress has prepared an important bill, which he will introduce in a few days, having for its object the establishment of different lines of steamships to Europe. The ideas on which the bill is framed are, that it is absolutely necessary for us to make a national effort to recover our commercial supremacy; and that, as private enterprise under existing laws is utterly incapable of accomplishing so great an undertaking, patriotism and statesmanship alike demand Government aid and encouragement. The bill will provide for the establishment of lines of steamships from Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New-York, each line to be subsidized. The proposition is to diminish the expenses of the Navy Department, which now average annually some twenty-nine millions, to, say fifteen millions per annum, and give about ten millions of dollars in subsidies. It is argued that in a few years the country will thus have a commercial marine second to that of no nation in the world, ready at all times to be turned over to the Government in case of need; that we shall have a school for our seamen, and that, in addition to all, it will be one of the best means to revive the shipbuilding interest.

RHODE ISLAND'S GIFT TO CONGRESS.

At the last session of Congress a bill was passed setting apart the old House of Representatives as a sort of national art gallery, and providing that each State of the Union as chose should be entitled to make the offer to Congress of a statue or other work of art commemorating some historic event, or eminent soldier or civilian, to be placed in this hall. Rhode Island, to-day, sent the first contribution in the shape of a statue of Major-General NATHANIEL GREENE, of the Revolutionary Army. The presentation was made in a neat speech by Senator ANTHONY, and its acceptance and a vote of thanks to Rhode Island was moved by Senator SUMNER.

RECEPTION BY MAYOR BOWEN.

Mayor BOWEN entertained the members of the District of Columbia Committees of both Houses. One of the principal objects of the meeting was to afford an opportunity for a friendly and social chat over the District wants, and the measures necessary to be taken to improve the city generally.

SENATE POST OFFICE COMMITTEE.

The Senate Post Office Committee had a meeting this morning, but it was more for the purpose of considering nominations for Postmasters, &c.

NOMINATIONS.

An Executive Session will be held to-morrow, when the Judiciary Committee will report several of the nominations before that body.

WASHINGTON'S AMUSEMENTS.

Washington is just now well supplied with amusements of a superior class, which is not often the case, and full houses greet them nightly. Your amusing and susceptible friends, the LIMBARDS, are at the National; LAURA KEENE keeps "School" at Wall's Opera House, and the Woman's Suffrage ladies perform at Lincoln Hall; while the MAX MARETZEK, the prince of operatic impresarios, is coming here next week with KELLOGG, LEVERANI, BONCONI and the rest of his troupe, to give Washington a week of such opera as it has not had for a whole year. The sale of seats has already been very large.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

The following appointments of Assistant Assessors have been made: For the Thirteenth District of New-York, William Wiggins, Henry M. Cooke, James Wilcox, John J. Weber, Silas M. Holden, H. H. Porter; for the Ninth District, Edwin Skidmore, Ferdinand Brandon, H. G. French, Peter B. Hengstsling, Albert Bogert, William F. Holl, J. Cassegra; for the Twenty-third District, John C. Hanchett and Charles J. Spaulding. The only nominations sent to the Senate to-day by the President were of a military character, and none above the rank of Captain.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE INDIAN COMMISSION.

The United States Indian Commission continued its session until to-day. On Monday the Cherokee Delegation, headed by Colonel DOWNING, their Chief, came before the Board and asked the Commission to use their influence with Congress against the passage of several bills, which they claim to be in direct violation of their treaties with the Government. Colonels ADAIR and VANDEVER, and Judge FIELD, were eloquent in their appeals for justice. The Commission promised their earnest attention to the subject. Chief Pitchelyn, of the Choctaw Nation, also made a warm appeal for schools among the Indians, declaring that the salvation of the race lay in these institutions. He said that there are many educated Christians in his tribe.

On motion of ex-Governor LANE, of Indiana, the Commission resolved to request the Secretary of the Interior to recommend to Congress to make liberal appropriations for educational purposes, to be expended among the tribes and bands gathered on the reservations or in other permanent homes, and to put the expenditures of all moneys not otherwise provided for under the direction of the Secretary; to place all schools for Indians ordered by the Government under the inspection of said Commissioners or other authorized agents.

Mr. ROBERT CAMPBELL, of St. Louis, then offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

That in the opinion of the Board it is important that the treaties made by the Government be promptly made by Congress to aid in locating the Apaches of Arizona and New-Mexico, on permanent reservations; also the immediate consolidation of the whole of the entire Indians and the economy of the Administration.

Commissioner FARWELL, of Chicago, having resigned the Secretaryship, the Board passed a complimentary resolution in regard to the faithful and prompt manner in which he had discharged his duties as Secretary of the Board. VINCENT COLYER, of New-York, was then elected Secretary, and FELIX R. BRUNOT, of Pittsburg, WM. E. DODGE and NATHAN BISHOP, of New-York, and GEO. H. STUART, of Philadelphia, were appointed an Executive Committee to conduct the business of the Board in the interim of the sessions.

Yesterday the Commissioners paid their respects to the President, and through their Chairman, Mr. BRUNOT, assured him of their increasing interest in the work and the economy of the President's policy. The President replied that he was pleased to learn that the Commissioners supported him in his endeavors to regulate Indian affairs. He thanked them for their services and said he was confident that faithfulness in carrying out treaties with kindness was the surest way of protecting the Western border from desolating and costly wars. When Congress failed to make the necessary appropriation and war ensued there was no other alternative but to use force, however expensive.

Mrs. GRANT entertained the wives of the Commissioners at a luncheon to-day, at the Executive Mansion. It is said to have been a very pleasant affair.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE...WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.

The House joint resolution on the subject of the ventilation of the halls of the Senate and House was laid before the Senate by the Chair. The amendment providing for ascertaining the cost of the proposed improvements was concurred in.

A STATUE TO GENERAL NATHANIEL GREENE.

Mr. ANTHONY presented a communication from the Governor of Rhode Island presenting to Congress, in the name of the people of that State, a marble statue of NATHANIEL GREENE. This statue had been placed in the old hall of the House of Representatives, in pursuance of an act of Congress setting apart that chamber as a receptacle for the statues of distinguished Americans now deceased—two from each State. Mr. ANTHONY, in presenting this duty, eulogized the character and services of General GREENE, and commented, at length upon the stirring times in which he lived and took active part, and their influence upon the history of the country.

Mr. SUMNER submitted resolutions accepting the statue, returning thanks to the Government of Rhode Island, and through him to the people of the State, for the beautiful work of art, and assigning the statue a place in the gallery of the old hall of the House. He said that among the Generals of the Revolution, GREENE was next after WASHINGTON in military genius, which was of no common order, had proved frequently shown. And this national recognition of his patriotism and fidelity to the cause of liberty, was eminently appropriate.

Mr. ANTHONY reviewed the military history of General GREENE, his remarkable personal character and the story of his sufferings, defeats and great achievements in the war of the Revolution. The General's greatest triumph, he said, had been achieved in South Carolina, which fact had been officially recognized by the Legislature of that State; and to-day, in behalf of South Carolina, he added his humble tribute of respect for the memory of General GREENE.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, also addressed the Senate, after which the concurrent resolutions submitted by Mr. SUMNER were adopted.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. CONKLING—For the preservation of harbors in the United States against encroachment.

By Mr. MORTON—To aid the Gunnison Way through public lands to the Junction City and Denver Railway Company.

By Mr. CASSERLY—To promote the disposition of public lands in California. It provides that thirty days after the passage of the act public lands shall be open to entry by homestead and preemption settlers only.

TELEGRAPH POSTAL SYSTEM.

Mr. RAMSEY introduced a bill to establish a postal telegraph system, and to incorporate the United States Postal Telegraph Company.

It authorizes the Postmaster-General to establish telegraph offices in connection with a post office in every city and village where telegraph stations are now maintained, and at such other places on the line of the telegraph as may be required by the community may require; to provide for the reception of messages at every postal telegraph office, pillar-office and street letter box, for their transmission between postal telegraph offices, in accordance with the Postal Telegraph Company, or on their special request, at places where a letter delivery is provided by law, or within one mile of every postal telegraph office; to deliver messages within the limits of regular delivery, at special rates, beyond such limits, excepting messages for the failure to abide by the previous arrangement. The motion of Mr. WILSON was then rejected by yeas 20, nays 28. Finally it was unanimously agreed to, yeas 48, nays 2, Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY. Mr. CONKLING explained that the object of the amendment was to enable the Senate to act intelligently upon the question of the admission of Virginia, and to prevent the necessity of calling the Legislature of Georgia, at a season of setting the State into the Union and afterwards defying the laws of Congress. Members of the Legislature were known to have taken the oath prescribed by Congress as a test of their eligibility, when they were entirely unable to take it without perjury. Several Senators inquired the name of the author of the communication.

Mr. HOWARD replied that he knew the author to be a gentleman of intelligence and reliability, who had resided several years in Georgia; but he declined to give his name, as its publication would expose his correspondent to personal danger.

Mr. MORTON said that within a few days past he had received a number of communications similar in character, some of which asserted that a fund had been raised to defend members of the Georgia Legislature from prosecution for perjury in taking the oath required.

A motion to adjourn by Mr. CAMERON was defeated by yeas 24, nays 27.

Messrs. CONKLING, HOWE and CASSERLY discussed the legal question involved in the exercise of jurisdiction over States not yet admitted to the Union.

Mr. HARLAN moved to adjourn, to enable the members of the Committee on the District of Columbia to keep an engagement with the Governor of Washington. Not agreed to; yeas 26, nays 24.

A subsequent motion by Mr. MORTON for adjournment met the same fate, by yeas 20, nays 25.

Mr. DRAKE said he protested against the attempt to take advantage of the absence of some of the Senators, by forcing a vote at this time upon the proposition he had submitted. He charged that the Senators having charge of this bill had gone around to the friends of the measure and induced them to remain, while the opponents of the bill had left the chamber in ignorance of the condition of affairs.

Several Senators remarked that absentees would return before a vote could be had upon the bill.

Mr. WILSON moved to adjourn, and said if the motion was agreed to, he would agree a vote should be taken to-morrow, (Friday,) at 4 o'clock.

Messrs. HOWARD and POMEROY expressed acquiescence in the proposition.

Mr. CASSERLY suggested that in any agreement to be made with the opponents of the bill, it should be specified by agreed that the whole of the Virginia question be disposed of at the time appointed, and not merely a particular bill, so that a former misunderstanding on the subject should not again occur.

Mr. TRUMBULL also desired to have a specific agreement, if any was to be made, and charged that in violating the arrangement which was made on the preceding Friday fixed a vote on Virginia should be taken on the following Monday, some Senators had acted in bad faith and with utter disregard of their obligations.

Mr. EDMUNDS said the agreement was to vote upon a particular bill at a particular time; but when that time arrived the bill had been substituted by another, and was no longer before the Senate.

Mr. TRUMBULL said the Senate and House Virginia bills were substantially identical, and that his understanding of the agreement which had been made was that a final vote upon the subject was to be had at the time indicated.

By his request, the Clerk read the bills, in order to show their similarity.

Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY said that the view just expressed coincided with their own understanding of the effect of the agreement.

Mr. CONKLING, in an conversational character, stated, during which various reasons were assigned for the failure to abide by the previous arrangement. The motion of Mr. WILSON was then rejected by yeas 20, nays 25. Finally it was unanimously agreed, yeas 48, nays 2, Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY, that the subject would be finally disposed of at 4 o'clock to-morrow (Friday) afternoon; when the Senate, at 4:35 P. M., adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. HOOPER, of Utah, presented a memorial for 25,000 citizens of Utah, praying admission as a State into the Union. Referred.

BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

The following bills, among others, were reported:

Mr. SMITH, of Oregon, introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the act for a railway from the Central Pacific Railway in California to Portland, Oregon. Referred.

Mr. HIGHAM asked leave to introduce a bill making it an offense punishable with fine and imprisonment for any person to propose to repeal the action of a State Legislature in ratifying any proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. DIXON, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to regulate appraisement and inspection of imports. Recommitted.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of inquiry were offered and agreed to in reference to the alleged correspondence between J. WATSON WEBB, late United States Minister to Brazil, and the Brazilian Government on the subject of the wreck of the ship Cutting; in reference to United States coaling stations; in reference to the removal of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and as to the names of the officers now to be provided, &c. A Commissioner of Telegraphs is to be appointed, and punishment provided for those who injure the telegraph. The sixth section incorporates Gardiner G. Hubbard, B. W. Davis and Zebulon Rhodes, of Massachusetts; Woodbury Davis, of Maine; A. F. Riker, of Ohio; John D. Tracy and E. D. L. Swett, of Illinois; E. Blakeley, of Minnesota; S. S. Allen, of Iowa; W. S. Bowen, of Kansas; Chas. G. Hosmer, of Nebraska; L. L. Sherrod and G. W. Works, of Arkansas; S. A. Stockdale and J. J. Weber, of Louisiana; Chas. J. Pollard, of Alabama; John P. Kinney, of Georgia; Peter Parker and Anthony Polish, of Washington, as a body politic under the name of the United States Postal Telegraph Company. Finally, it is provided that at any time after five years from its constitution, the Postmaster-General may purchase the property and franchises of the Company, as defined in the act, by five disinterested persons, two to be chosen by the Postmaster-General, two by the Company, and the fifth by the four thus selected, and the purchase shall be approved and the purchase consummated by Congress.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. TRAVER, by way of correction, said that in his remarks on the preceding day relative to errors in the statistics of commerce, with the circulation of petitions for the abolition of the franking privilege, he had referred to the rock-ribbed statements made in behalf of the proposed reform. He did not intend to impute to any head of department intentional misrepresentation, and asserted his confidence in the purity of the motives of the Postmaster-General.

THE CENSUS.

Mr. CONKLING, from the Committee on Revision of Laws, reported the House Census bill, with an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be instructed so to change the schedule and blanks for the census of the inhabitants of the United States in 1870 to make the same conform to the Constitution of the United States.

THE ADMISSION OF VIRGINIA.

The Virginia bill was then taken up.

Mr. WILSON moved to amend by inserting a proviso that the Constitution of the State shall never be so amended as to deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the United States of the right to vote or hold office who are now entitled to vote under said Constitution, except in punishment of crime, nor exclude from service as juror any person on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. DRAKE renewed the amendment previously offered by him admitting Virginia to representation in Congress on the following fundamental conditions:

That the State Constitution shall never be changed so deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the right to vote, who are now entitled to vote, except in punishment of crime, or shall in any manner deny or abridge, whenever they shall be in form duly enacted as the law, equally applicable to all inhabitants of said State, provided that any alteration of the State Constitution prospective in its effects may be made in regard to the time and place of residence of the voters.

Mr. DRAKE said this fundamental condition had been submitted to the reconstructed States, and in view of the proposed attempt, which he believed to be in the programme of the Democracy, to overturn the Fifteenth Amendment by the aid of the Courts and another Department of the Government, it was necessary, by some means, to secure the protection of the black race in Virginia and the other late rebellious States.

Mr. HARLAN supported the amendment in a lengthy speech, principally because of its necessity as a measure of protection for the loyal people of Virginia, by insuring to them the free exercise of civil rights. Having been imposed upon the other States these fundamental conditions should not be omitted in the case of Virginia.

Mr. HOWARD said stringent conditions to prevent the ostracism of colored people were particularly applicable to Virginia as foremost of the States in rebellion.

Mr. THURMAN said the proposition of the amendment was to say to a State that her people should not be allowed to amend their own Constitution. He denied the power of Congress to make such a declaration of effect prior to a constitutional amendment, by which some of the reserved rights of the States still left would be taken from them. In this way only could the Constitution be made to authorize this exercise of power.

Further debate upon the question of the validity of an alleged compact between the United States and a State, prior to the admission of the State, was participated in by Messrs. MORTON, DAVIS, THURMAN and HARLAN.

Mr. HOWARD forwarded to the clerk and had read, a telegram from a citizen of Atlanta, Ga., whose name he refused to divulge, for prudential reasons, setting forth that a conspiracy was in progress in the Legislature of Georgia, as a means of getting the State into the Union and afterwards defying the laws of Congress. Members of the Legislature were known to have taken the oath prescribed by Congress as a test of their eligibility, when they were entirely unable to take it without perjury. Several Senators inquired the name of the author of the communication.

Mr. HOWARD replied that he knew the author to be a gentleman of intelligence and reliability, who had resided several years in Georgia; but he declined to give his name, as its publication would expose his correspondent to personal danger.

Mr. MORTON said that within a few days past he had received a number of communications similar in character, some of which asserted that a fund had been raised to defend members of the Georgia Legislature from prosecution for perjury in taking the oath required.

A motion to adjourn by Mr. CAMERON was defeated by yeas 24, nays 27.

Messrs. CONKLING, HOWE and CASSERLY discussed the legal question involved in the exercise of jurisdiction over States not yet admitted to the Union.

Mr. HARLAN moved to adjourn, to enable the members of the Committee on the District of Columbia to keep an engagement with the Governor of Washington. Not agreed to; yeas 26, nays 24.

A subsequent motion by Mr. MORTON for adjournment met the same fate, by yeas 20, nays 25.

Mr. DRAKE said he protested against the attempt to take advantage of the absence of some of the Senators, by forcing a vote at this time upon the proposition he had submitted. He charged that the Senators having charge of this bill had gone around to the friends of the measure and induced them to remain, while the opponents of the bill had left the chamber in ignorance of the condition of affairs.

Several Senators remarked that absentees would return before a vote could be had upon the bill.

Mr. WILSON moved to adjourn, and said if the motion was agreed to, he would agree a vote should be taken to-morrow, (Friday,) at 4 o'clock.

Messrs. HOWARD and POMEROY expressed acquiescence in the proposition.

Mr. CASSERLY suggested that in any agreement to be made with the opponents of the bill, it should be specified by agreed that the whole of the Virginia question be disposed of at the time appointed, and not merely a particular bill, so that a former misunderstanding on the subject should not again occur.

By his request, the Clerk read the bills, in order to show their similarity.

Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY said that the view just expressed coincided with their own understanding of the effect of the agreement.

Mr. CONKLING, in an conversational character, stated, during which various reasons were assigned for the failure to abide by the previous arrangement. The motion of Mr. WILSON was then rejected by yeas 20, nays 25. Finally it was unanimously agreed, yeas 48, nays 2, Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY, that the subject would be finally disposed of at 4 o'clock to-morrow (Friday) afternoon; when the Senate, at 4:35 P. M., adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. HOOPER, of Utah, presented a memorial for 25,000 citizens of Utah, praying admission as a State into the Union. Referred.

Resolutions of inquiry were offered and agreed to in reference to the alleged correspondence between J. WATSON WEBB, late United States Minister to Brazil, and the Brazilian Government on the subject of the wreck of the ship Cutting; in reference to United States coaling stations; in reference to the removal of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and as to the names of the officers now to be provided, &c. A Commissioner of Telegraphs is to be appointed, and punishment provided for those who injure the telegraph. The sixth section incorporates Gardiner G. Hubbard, B. W. Davis and Zebulon Rhodes, of Massachusetts; Woodbury Davis, of Maine; A. F. Riker, of Ohio; John D. Tracy and E. D. L. Swett, of Illinois; E. Blakeley, of Minnesota; S. S. Allen, of Iowa; W. S. Bowen, of Kansas; Chas. G. Hosmer, of Nebraska; L. L. Sherrod and G. W. Works, of Arkansas; S. A. Stockdale and J. J. Weber, of Louisiana; Chas. J. Pollard, of Alabama; John P. Kinney, of Georgia; Peter Parker and Anthony Polish, of Washington, as a body politic under the name of the United States Postal Telegraph Company. Finally, it is provided that at any time after five years from its constitution, the Postmaster-General may purchase the property and franchises of the Company, as defined in the act, by five disinterested persons, two to be chosen by the Postmaster-General, two by the Company, and the fifth by the four thus selected, and the purchase shall be approved and the purchase consummated by Congress.

A PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. TRAVER, by way of correction, said that in his remarks on the preceding day relative to errors in the statistics of commerce, with the circulation of petitions for the abolition of the franking privilege, he had referred to the rock-ribbed statements made in behalf of the proposed reform. He did not intend to impute to any head of department intentional misrepresentation, and asserted his confidence in the purity of the motives of the Postmaster-General.

THE CENSUS.

Mr. CONKLING, from the Committee on Revision of Laws, reported the House Census bill, with an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be instructed so to change the schedule and blanks for the census of the inhabitants of the United States in 1870 to make the same conform to the Constitution of the United States.

THE ADMISSION OF VIRGINIA.

The Virginia bill was then taken up.

Mr. WILSON moved to amend by inserting a proviso that the Constitution of the State shall never be so amended as to deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the United States of the right to vote or hold office who are now entitled to vote under said Constitution, except in punishment of crime, nor exclude from service as juror any person on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. DRAKE renewed the amendment previously offered by him admitting Virginia to representation in Congress on the following fundamental conditions:

That the State Constitution shall never be changed so deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the right to vote, who are now entitled to vote, except in punishment of crime, or shall in any manner deny or abridge, whenever they shall be in form duly enacted as the law, equally applicable to all inhabitants of said State, provided that any alteration of the State Constitution prospective in its effects may be made in regard to the time and place of residence of the voters.

Mr. DRAKE said this fundamental condition had been submitted to the reconstructed States, and in view of the proposed attempt, which he believed to be in the programme of the Democracy, to overturn the Fifteenth Amendment by the aid of the Courts and another Department of the Government, it was necessary, by some means, to secure the protection of the black race in Virginia and the other late rebellious States.

Mr. HARLAN supported the amendment in a lengthy speech, principally because of its necessity as a measure of protection for the loyal people of Virginia, by insuring to them the free exercise of civil rights. Having been imposed upon the other States these fundamental conditions should not be omitted in the case of Virginia.

Mr. HOWARD said stringent conditions to prevent the ostracism of colored people were particularly applicable to Virginia as foremost of the States in rebellion.

Mr. THURMAN said the proposition of the amendment was to say to a State that her people should not be allowed to amend their own Constitution. He denied the power of Congress to make such a declaration of effect prior to a constitutional amendment, by which some of the reserved rights of the States still left would be taken from them. In this way only could the Constitution be made to authorize this exercise of power.

Further debate upon the question of the validity of an alleged compact between the United States and a State, prior to the admission of the State, was participated in by Messrs. MORTON, DAVIS, THURMAN and HARLAN.

Mr. HOWARD forwarded to the clerk and had read, a telegram from a citizen of Atlanta, Ga., whose name he refused to divulge, for prudential reasons, setting forth that a conspiracy was in progress in the Legislature of Georgia, as a means of getting the State into the Union and afterwards defying the laws of Congress. Members of the Legislature were known to have taken the oath prescribed by Congress as a test of their eligibility, when they were entirely unable to take it without perjury. Several Senators inquired the name of the author of the communication.

Mr. HOWARD replied that he knew the author to be a gentleman of intelligence and reliability, who had resided several years in Georgia; but he declined to give his name, as its publication would expose his correspondent to personal danger.

Mr. MORTON said that within a few days past he had received a number of communications similar in character, some of which asserted that a fund had been raised to defend members of the Georgia Legislature from prosecution for perjury in taking the oath required.

A motion to adjourn by Mr. CAMERON was defeated by yeas 24, nays 27.

Messrs. CONKLING, HOWE and CASSERLY discussed the legal question involved in the exercise of jurisdiction over States not yet admitted to the Union.

Mr. HARLAN moved to adjourn, to enable the members of the Committee on the District of Columbia to keep an engagement with the Governor of Washington. Not agreed to; yeas 26, nays 24.

A subsequent motion by Mr. MORTON for adjournment met the same fate, by yeas 20, nays 25.

Mr. DRAKE said he protested against the attempt to take advantage of the absence of some of the Senators, by forcing a vote at this time upon the proposition he had submitted. He charged that the Senators having charge of this bill had gone around to the friends of the measure and induced them to remain, while the opponents of the bill had left the chamber in ignorance of the condition of affairs.

Several Senators remarked that absentees would return before a vote could be had upon the bill.

Mr. WILSON moved to adjourn, and said if the motion was agreed to, he would agree a vote should be taken to-morrow, (Friday,) at 4 o'clock.

Mr. CASSERLY suggested that in any agreement to be made with the opponents of the bill, it should be specified by agreed that the whole of the Virginia question be disposed of at the time appointed, and not merely a particular bill, so that a former misunderstanding on the subject should not again occur.

Mr. TRUMBULL also desired to have a specific agreement, if any was to be made, and charged that in violating the arrangement which was made on the preceding Friday fixed a vote on Virginia should be taken on the following Monday, some Senators had acted in bad faith and with utter disregard of their obligations.

Mr. EDMUNDS said the agreement was to vote upon a particular bill at a particular time; but when that time arrived the bill had been substituted by another, and was no longer before the Senate.

Mr. TRUMBULL said the Senate and House Virginia bills were substantially identical, and that his understanding of the agreement which had been made was that a final vote upon the subject was to be had at the time indicated.

By his request, the Clerk read the bills, in order to show their similarity.

Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY said that the view just expressed coincided with their own understanding of the effect of the agreement.

Mr. CONKLING, in an conversational character, stated, during which various reasons were assigned for the failure to abide by the previous arrangement. The motion of Mr. WILSON was then rejected by yeas 20, nays 25. Finally it was unanimously agreed, yeas 48, nays 2, Messrs. CONKLING and CASSERLY, that the subject would be finally disposed of at 4 o'clock to-morrow (Friday) afternoon; when the Senate, at 4:35 P. M., adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. HOOPER, of Utah, presented a memorial for 25,000 citizens of Utah, praying admission as a State into the Union. Referred.

BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

The following bills, among others, were reported:

Mr. SMITH, of Oregon, introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the act for a railway from the Central Pacific Railway in California to Portland, Oregon. Referred.

Mr. HIGHAM asked leave to introduce a bill making it an offense punishable with fine and imprisonment for any person to propose to repeal the action of a State Legislature in ratifying any proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. DIXON, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to regulate appraisement and inspection of imports. Recommitted.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of inquiry were offered and agreed to in reference to the alleged correspondence between J. WATSON WEBB, late United States Minister to Brazil, and the Brazilian Government on the subject of the wreck of the ship Cutting; in reference to United States coaling stations; in reference to

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

EVENINGS WITH THE SACRED POETS: A SERIES OF QUIET TALKS ABOUT THE SINGERS AND THEIR SONGS. By the author of "Festival of Song," &c. New-York: RANDOLPH & Co. 1871.

Selections of sacred poetry are not uncommon, but this volume does something more than string together a number of pieces which have been more or less known to the public for years past. The author has evidently brought considerable research and study to the task of presenting a complete picture of the sacred poetry and hymnology of the Christian ages. In the first place, we have an account of the Biblical, Greek and other early Latin sacred poets, with characteristic examples of their productions. From this point the author conducts us gradually down to our own day, and passes in review nearly all the countries which can boast of great writers in this department of literature. The plan of the work is something similar to that of Mr. CHARLES KNIGHT's Half Hours with the Best Authors, but Mr. SANDERS has not had recourse to any other compilation for his quotations. We may say further that his "connecting links" between the poets are never very long, and that the reader will often be inclined to regret the author's indisposition to obtrude himself into the foreground. With regard to the extracts, we can fairly give still higher praise. They are made with care and appreciation, and in the spirit of a man who heartily responds to those solemn appeals which sacred poets make to the better feelings. We have noticed in this volume many half-forgotten gems which have long been hidden away unnoticed in old magazines, and which are now placed side by side, as they deserve to be, with hymns of WESLEY, TOPLADY and MONTGOMERY. The last two chapters of the work, on "Modern English and American Poets," will be particularly prized by many of our readers. We could wish that the quotations here had been a little more liberal, but many very beautiful examples of various writers are given, and we are told where more are to be found. Dr. RAY PALMER has contributed an original hymn to this division of the book, and here, too, will be found the beautiful verses beginning, "Just as thou art, without one trace," by Rev. R. S. COOK, of New-York. Another poem of great tenderness and beauty is either contributed by, or quoted from, A. D. F. RANDOLPH, of New-York. Altogether, we know of no selection of sacred poetry so suitable for Sunday reading as this. Not the least of its merits is that it is not likely to become tiresome, for the comments of the author give it freshness and variety. The extracts which we have met with before are all excellent, and those which will be new to the majority of readers are welcome additions to the friends so long familiar to us.

LADY BYRON VINDICATED: A HISTORY OF THE BYRON CONTROVERSY FROM ITS BEGINNING IN 1816 TO THE PRESENT TIME. By CHARLES SPRAGUE SMITH. Boston: FIELDS, OSGOOD & Co.

HEDORA LEIGH: A HISTORY AND AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY. Edited by CHARLES MACKAY. "In Some Dare Ladies." London: RICHARD BENTLEY.

Most readers of taste, and especially those whom we address, will hardly care to enter upon any examination in detail of the subject to which these books refer. Nevertheless, as a part of the literary history of the time, and of a discussion that has attracted universal attention, we record the fact of their publication, and briefly set forth their general drift and intent. The purpose of Mrs. STOWE's book is, indeed, manifest enough; her processes and conclusions, however, require to be closely followed in order to be understood as she would have them. Mrs. STOWE considers her case to be established by this volume. Some readers—ourselves among the number—are of an opposite opinion. The inference from her reasoning, that either the allegation against BYRON is true or that Lady BYRON was insane, seems to be, on the whole, a sound one. Conviction on either side will probably crystallize into these two forms of belief. To whatever conclusion different thinkers may be led by logic or prejudice, no fair-minded person can doubt, we think, the thoroughness of Mrs. STOWE's conviction or the loyalty of her feeling, however mistaken its manifestation, towards her departed friend. The book that reaches us from London, from which our readers have already had copious extracts, and which is edited by the former New-York correspondent of the London Times, purports to be the history of the child, MEDORA, who was known to be the offspring of Mrs. LEIGH, but whom some have believed to be BYRON's. The volume originated in a manuscript brought to Dr. MACKAY "by a friend of thirty years' standing," a month or six weeks after the publication in Macmillan of Mrs. STOWE's article. The manuscript had lain unheeded for twenty-six years. It was at first thought by Dr. MACKAY to be the work of an impostor. He, however, became convinced of its authenticity. He subsequently

"Several times went over all the documents, and carefully compared the statements contained in them with those made by Mrs. BEECHER STOWE, and with all the contributions to the perplexing story of Lord and Lady BYRON's separation in 1816, which have gone the round of the newspapers and periodicals for the last three months. He came at last to the conclusion that they disproved all Mrs. STOWE's allegations relative to the year of the separation; and fixed the date of the first time when the charge was brought against Mrs. LEIGH to the year 1821, seven years after Lord BYRON's death; and of the charge against Lord BYRON himself to the year 1840. He was also of opinion that he had discovered something like a clue to the authors of the scandal and to their motives. The result of his deliberations on the subject was the present volume, where the reader will find an examination of the two stories of Mrs. STOWE and of Miss LEIGH; together with the reasons for his belief that the charge against Lord BYRON's memory is not only unproved and unprovable, but untrue."

Dr. MACKAY's book has just been republished in New-York, and will no doubt receive quite as much attention as it deserves.

LOVE SONGS AND OTHER POEMS. By MARY AIDUE DE VERE. New-York: Fifth-avenue Publishing Company. 1872.

There are some pretty verses in this little volume. It comes to us with names of author and publisher alike, hitherto unheard of, but for all that the "Love Songs" are bright with the freshness of youth and hope. As usual under similar circumstances, there is the ring of melody heard before in these poems. Imagination, without which poesy were impossible, quickens appreciation, and the first sight of beautiful things is apt to inspire both enthusiasm and emulation. This is to be expected. But what we try to discern through and beyond the effect of such reminiscences is the sign of original power to come. The little work before us does not lack that sign. It is expressed in genuine feeling, in occasional outbursts of independent thought, and in a felicity of diction and an eye for color that here and there indicate the stuff that true poets are made of. Much of the verse that reaches us just now is of a sort that does anything but justify encouragement, but a considerable part of that contained in this volume deserves to be honorably accepted. We have little doubt that the fair writer may, if she will, win for herself an honorable place in the records of song. Such a consummation will, however, require hard work, a deaf ear to flattery and a patient cultivation of natural gifts which are of no common order.

THE MAGAZINES.

—Some reaction is almost inevitable with a magazine after the attainment of the plane of excellence that usually denotes the opening of a new volume, and the February Galaxy, no less than most of its contemporaries, illustrates the fact. Mr. READE's story continues, and, with many, will atone for shortcomings elsewhere. "Expressions," by T. M. COAN, contains some close and refined thought, but is rather wire-drawn, and jumps with the fashion of the time in positing supposed analogies and doubtful precedents too far. Mr. JUSTIN MCCARTHY's account of BEECHAM YOUNG is very iconoclastic, and, we doubt not, entirely trustworthy. The miscellaneous writing at the end is fairly up to its mark, and the stories are, at least, not commonplace—except, strangely enough, ANTHONY TROLLOPE's "Panjandrum," which is the poorest "Editor's Table" he has given us. It bears traces of weariness that are communicated with great facility to the reader, and has little of his usual originality and nice contrasting of character.

—Mr. BAYARD TAYLOR continues in the new Atlantic his story of "Joseph and his Friend." HELEN HUNT, WILLIAM MINTON and GEORGE COOKE contribute snatches of song, the palm of merit resting with the lady. Mr. PARTON has another of his articles aiming at legislative reform, and called "The Pressure on Congress." An anonymous writer furnishes an essay, and calls it "Quiz," on the lately-favorite topic of Dipsomania. Mr. CHARLES DAWSON SHANLY discourses with adequate appreciation on "The Street Cries of New-York." We were in hopes to hear no more of the "Brick Moon," which a usually acceptable writer has fallen into the error of thinking amusing—but here is more of it and in the old strain. Mrs. CELIA THAXTER and Mr. C. A. COLLINS offer readable papers, and a strong and feeling obituary of Mr. STANTON is given in conclusion, by Mr. HENRY WILSON.

—The February Hours at Home opens with a sensible paper upon the literature of our Sunday Schools, which might be read and applied with advantage by many who are interested in more purely secular institutions. The writer of Books and Reading, treats a similar subject in a discriminating and agreeable manner, and discusses the exhaustless topic of novels with some freshness. The serials are worthy the reputation of their well-known writers, Mrs. CRAIK and the author of Mary Powell, and the remaining articles are adapted to please well-informed young people.

—The new Putnam maintains a gentle level of dullness, broken by one or two outbursts of the true, old-fashioned Magazine story; full of love and murder, improbable incident and un-life-like character. "Ben" is a picturesque sketch, and "Father HYACINTHE's Predecessor," an interesting reminiscence, well described; but these two short articles are insufficient to leaven the whole lump of the number, which is heavy without being particularly instructive.

—Old and New, the second number of a new magazine published in Boston, has the size, weight and gravity which usually characterize quarterlies. The contents are varied and well contrasted. Mrs. JULIA WARD HOWE, with great facility, turns from the subject of "The West as it Is" to reflections upon dialectics, KANT and HEGEL, which lead her to some encouraging conclusions. A paper called "Language a Fine Art" gives a string of reasons for objecting to errors in speech, some of them so glaring that their very mention seems out of place in a periodical intended for the perusal of cultivated people. "Colonel Ingham" continues his curious fable entitled "Ten Times One is Ten," in a manner often suggestive of the author to so evidently admire; an excellent paper discusses the Freedman's Bureau, and some reviews and interesting miscellanies make up the number.

—The Journal of Speculative Philosophy. Published and edited by WM. T. HARRIS, St. Louis, Mo. Vol. III. For sale by JOHN WILEY & SONS, New-York. We have before us the fourth number of the third volume of this angular journal, which, perhaps, few of the wondering readers of its first volume expected to survive a twelvemonth, but which now comes out boldly with a prospectus for the fourth year of its issue. Such energy and self-sacrifice on the part of the editors deserve from the American public better support than has as yet been extended; and, considering the low price of $3 per annum, at which the work is published, it seems surprising that there are not yet sufficient subscribers—say five or six hundred—to pay for the paper and printing. Apart from the fact that this Journal is the only one of its kind ever published in the English language, and stands solitary and alone in its philosophical wanderings for absolute truth as against the denial of it by the Herbert Spencer and Comte school, there is the further and perhaps greater recommendation, that it furnishes and engrafts upon English literature the profoundest speculations of German genius. Our English literature is by far too deficient in its translations of foreign works of genius. The best productions of Goethe, Leibnitz, Descartes, Winkelmann, Kant, Wolf, Schilling, Hegel, Herder, Jacobi, Schleiermacher, are virtually inaccessible to us. Now this Journal of Speculative Philosophy, published on the banks of the Mississippi, has done more towards opening that immense store of learning and thought to the English public than any other publication in our language. We only wish it would somewhat extend its range of selections—although this is, perhaps, asking too much from a quarterly. Perhaps hereafter the editors may be enabled by better support to change their periodical into a monthly and add to the purely philosophical articles translations of these great German works, which, though philosophical in their method, yet combine with that the graces of choice diction. The present number of the Journal embraces the following articles: 1. The Last Part of the New Exposition of the Science of Knowledge, translated from FICHTE by A. E. KROEGER. 2. BENARY's Analysis of HEGEL's Æsthetics. From the French, by J. A. MARTLING. 3. BERKLEY's Doctrine on the Nature of Matter. An original contribution. T. COLLYNS SIMON. 4. HEGEL's First Principle. A translation of one of HEGEL's works, with introduction and commentary, by WM. T. HARRIS. 5. The Problems of Philosophy at the Present Time. An original contribution by Professor E. VON HARTMANN, of Berlin. 6. Is Thought the Thinker? Another contribution by T. COLLYNS SIMON; and, finally, a Preface to the third volume by Mr. HARRIS, the editor. For next year, we are informed, a valuable feature is in store in the shape of translations from the old Greek metaphysicians PARMENIDES, HERACLITUS, ZENO, &c. The next number will contain a full and accurate translation, in hexameters, of PARMENIDES' celebrated poem—the first full translation, we believe, printed in the English language. The translation is by Professor THOMAS DAVIDSON, teacher of Greek in the St. Louis High School, and one of our most learned Greek scholars. The poem will be accompanied by copious notes. Mr. WM. T. HARRIS, the editor, who is also Superintendent of Public Schools in St. Louis, will continue his translations from HEGEL, and those original expositions of HEGEL's system which have already won for him deserved reputation; and Mr. KROEGER will in the next number throw his favorite FICHTE aside and contribute a series of the famous "Revised Sayings of the Cherubim Wanderer," translated from the German of JOHANN SCHEFLER, otherwise called "Angelus Silesius." We do not hesitate to recommend the Journal of Speculative Philosophy to the patronage of our learned men and indeed, of all earnest students. In Europe—Germany, France, Italy and England—the Journal has long ago secured a recognition which, we think, it deserves still more in the country which has given it birth.

—The Law Almanac for 1872. New-York: HURD & HOUGHTON. This is the first volume of a proposed annual series, the value of which will, on consideration, be at once apparent. In addition to a calendar and diary, it contains particulars of the Executive Departments and Judiciary of all the States and Territories, the Courts of the United States, the Attorney-General's office, lists of the members of the Cabinet, Congress, Foreign Ministers, &c., &c. The matter is arranged in a clear and concise manner, and the work is evidently compiled with great care and labor. It is a most valuable addition to the counting room, the library, or any other place where commercial geography is frequent matter of reference.

—Messrs. SCRIBNER & Co. have received a supply from London of Wallcher's Almanac for 1870. It is a very cheap and valuable publication, and contains a mass of information respecting the Government, finances, population, commerce, &c., of the entire habitable globe, compiled with evident care and labor.

CURRENT NOTES.

Senator ANTHONY's paper speaks of Senator "Cragan." O, the types!

The Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati are to send a colony to Colorado.

General JOHN BEDELL has written a letter formally accepting the Democratic nomination for Governor of New-Hampshire.

Governor WASHBURN, of Vermont, is seriously ill at his home in Woodstock with an affection of the lungs.

Pansies and violets, which have bloomed in the open air, are the present boast of lovers of flowers in Massachusetts.

The wild geese are going North again. Before March they will learn why silly people are called geese.

A Knoxville paper talks about the "handwriting" on the wall, although it isn't right to write wise in that way.

The Galveston Civilian predicts that General REYNOLDS and MORGAN C. HAMILTON will be elected United States Senators from Texas.

Under Governor JEWELL's administration the debt of Connecticut has been reduced $200,000 during the past year, against $150,000 the year previous.

The Philadelphia Telegraph reports that WILLIAM B. REED has been living in retirement at a hotel in that city since "his recent financial misfortune."

Mr. EDGAR CONKLIN, proprietor of Mackinaw City, Mich., proposes to found at that point what he hopes will prove to be a grand Central Christian University.

A Chicago paper reports that a "palatial residence" in that city was "decanted" of two valuable overcoats by a sneak thief a few nights ago.

The King of the Sandwich Islands has appointed CHARLES COPEN HARRIS Minister of Foreign Affairs, and J. MOTT SMITH Minister of Finance, in place of Mr. HARRIS.

The Sunday Schools in the Sandwich Islands are flourishing. On Christmas Day there was an absence of the Kawaiahao Sunday school, and the Honolulu Gazette says it was successful in every particular.

The Philadelphia Library Company has purchased for $75,000, with the approval of the executor of the Rush estate, a site for its new building, but its funds will not permit it to build for some years to come.

The directors of the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad held a meeting in Boston on Wednesday, and it is announced that Mr. JOHN B. ELDRIDGE will remain its President and SAMUEL HALL, Jr., Treasurer.

A gentleman, who entered the room of his brother-in-law in a Texas hotel a few nights since, struck a match for a light, and the brother-in-law mistaking the sound for the cocking of a pistol, shot him dead.

Texas papers report that twelve or fifteen hundred immigrants of good character could make arrangements at this time for working the plantations in Dewitt County on shares, and have their subsistence, stock and agricultural implements furnished them.

The well-known collection of minerals which PROFESSOR REUSS commenced at Princeton, N. J., in 1790, and which now numbers about five thousand specimens of American ores, is to be placed in the museum of the Maryland Academy of Sciences, in Baltimore.

It is stated that FREDERICK T. WALLACE, a well-known and and hitherto highly-respected lawyer in Cleveland, Ohio, has fled from that city after being detected in a long and adroit series of forgeries. The amount thus far ascertained is over $24,000.

The vote for United States Senator in the Senate of Iowa on Tuesday was: Long term—G. G. Wright, 27; Thos. W. Clagett, 2. Short term—James B. Howell, 28; John G. Stoneman, 4. In the House the vote was: Long term—G. G. Wright, 30; Thos. W. Clagett, 12. Short term—James B. Howell, 30; John G. Stoneman, 12.

A Southern paper informs us that a lawyer and a red-hot stove, the one having its feet braced against the other, upset in the Chancery Court at Nashville the other day while Judge GAULT was reading a deposition. The fire flew all over the room, and the Chancellor vociferously declared the Court adjourned.

Two daughters of a thrifty farmer in Princeton, Ill., 15 and 17 years old, completed on Monday evening the task of walking eighty miles within twenty consecutive hours, for a prize of $100. They began at 9 o'clock in the morning, and finished at 8:30 in the evening, having one hour and thirty-seven minutes to spare.

The New-Orleans Times, referring to the "new and greatly extended claim recently set up by Mrs. GAINES" to a large portion of the real estate in that city, says that it is the opinion of counsel that this claim is based on an entire misconception on her part, the property which she now claims having been sold by DANIEL CLARKE before his death.

When the Indianapolis Opera House was discovered to be on fire on Monday night, about half of the audience escaped out through the principal exit, while the remainder sought escape by another passage and found on reaching the street door that it was locked. Fortunately it contained a glass sash, and this was knocked out and in a few minutes the door was thrown open.

The Philadelphia Bulletin demands a new Post Office for that city, saying that for one-half of the amount expended upon the Boston Post Office, and for one-third or one-fourth of that to be expended on the New-York Office, the Government can erect such a building in Philadelphia, as it now requires for any proper accommodation of its business.

The Secretary of the Navy has not yet approved of the findings and sentence of the naval general Court Martial which tried Lieutenant-Commander H. H. SMITH. It is understood that there are certain legal questions in the way of such action in this case. The matter has caused much comment in Washington, and it is generally regarded as a very unfortunate affair, whatever may be the merits of the case. The officer is a gallant and meritorious officer, and has been in the service for 15 years, without the stain of a reprimand. The sentence, which was published in full in THE TIMES, dated Jan. 1, 1871, set aside the plea of insanity, and sentenced him to be cashiered, and he desired to invest the money in business. He was told that perhaps he could get the money at thirty-three per cent. off the face of the note, and that even at that price it was by no means certain that he could negotiate it. Small bills are very scarce, indeed unattainable beyond a few hundred dollars. This has caused great inconvenience to planters, who needed small money to pay off their hands in Louisiana. I knew some who sold their cotton to pay their laborers, and who were paid by the bank in bale and bale bits, and were unable to get bills of the small denominations except at a premium.

STATE SCENTICS.

The political world is, as may be supposed, greatly disturbed, and all eyes and ears are turned towards Albany to learn what will happen there to-day. Prophecies vary so much, according to the interests and predilections of the men who utter them, that it would be improfitable to repeat them. In the meantime, pending the permanent settlement of the vexed question, there is a rumor to the effect that a large amount of capital in various industrial projects, have folded their hands, locked their money boxes, and await events.

CONFEDERATE DEBTS.

The State statute barring all debts incurred prior to the 16th of June, 1865, which were not put in suit before the 1st of January, 1872, has given the lawyers and Clerks of Courts a very lively time, and has caused widespread disaster among the debtors, who believed their Confederate debts were as dead as the currency in which they incurred them. The cry for "relief" in new legislation was in vain, and it should not be at all surprised to see a supplementary act passed by the Legislature, repealing rather summarily all of indebtedness of which Confederate notes were the basis. On the 20th and 21st of December were drawn in every direction, and their speculation was frustrated. The first intimation which the defendants received that a judgment had been rendered against them was generally in the form of a notice of a claim of ownership, or a claim of some of the claims for which they were sued.

Line and Staff in the Navy—The Discipline of the Service.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am a constant reader of the TIMES, and acknowledge its right and ability to guide public opinion, but you must allow me to say that in your articles which now and then appear on the subject of rank in the navy, your inclination in favor of the so-called staff side of the question is inconsistent with the conservative character of your paper.

The TIMES is essentially the organ of law and order, and in its discussion of public matters pursues that dignified course of reasoning so indispensable for the formation of a correct judgment on all subjects. In your editorial of 18th inst., on "Staff and Line Again," I cannot complain of your style; but regret to find that unwittingly you are opposing discipline and tending to bring about a state of things that must result most deplorably for the service.

You dwell particularly upon the fact that the staff officers have never been guilty of "usurping command." There certainly can be little credit in this, for the surgeon would be as unfit to sail a ship as the Captain would be to cut off a leg; but practically, does not resisting authority or refusing to obey a command have the same effect as if the actual command of the ship were usurped? Of what possible use can a Captain be in command if his authority and right to command is to be questioned and denied? In discipline or order can be sustained properly on board a vessel of war, unless there be yielded a perfect obedience to authority. In order to preserve this sense of necessary obedience in those who must always be subordinate, it is indispensable that the power of rank should be associated with the person exercising the authority. This rank should be regarded as something that is attached especially to the position of authority, constituting in itself that authority. It should be considered as unattainable except by those in its line, and only to be reached by them after years of patient subordination. Rank is an artificial power necessary for authority, and cannot be assailed without injury to the organization of which it is the root. There is no place where blind obedience to rank is more indispensable for protection of life and property than on board of a vessel-of-war. On every day duties of a sea officer on deck demand the most prompt and implicit obedience to his orders, and it is through his acknowledged rank that he is enabled to command obedience. To deprive those who have to exercise authority on board ship of the authority given by rank, by forcing them to hold it in common with many about them, is to take from them that requisite which has always been acknowledged as indispensable for command and control. It is not only force of character and knowledge of profession which enables a Captain to command. He must be aided by the majesty that hedges around one of acknowledged rank. If this rank be deprived of all its vital character by such a system of depletion as is now proposed by the staff of the navy, no Captain can expect prompt obedience. Neglect or delay in executing orders may probably result in disaster. The Quarter-Deck of a vessel-of-war be converted into a hotbed of noisy wrangling and hot-headed argumentation. I feel confident that if many of the supporters of the so-called staff innovations could be brought to a thorough practical understanding of the difficulties which would attend this move, they would withdraw their support from a cause which is aiming at the very life of the service.

It is not necessary that the actual command should be usurped in order to impair efficiency; the result may be achieved in other ways, and these ways are being multiplied as the idea gains ground of coming to couple rank with authority.

I will cite an instance or two in my own experience, while the so-called staff were enjoying the rank of which they have been so properly deprived by the present administration, in order to illustrate how authority may be assumed and interfered with without "usurping command." During a late cruise an injury occurred to my engine. After certain repairs made at sea I directed it to be started. The Chief Engineer called for a written order in order to relieve him from his so-called responsibility!

Again, the Surgeon and Paymaster were directed to forward their communications through a certain channel. They protested against the order!

Again, the fleet officers (Fleet Surgeon, Fleet Paymaster and Fleet Engineer) sent orders to the Surgeon, Paymaster and Engineer under my command without taking the slightest note of my position of command, a mode of proceeding which the Secretary of the Navy himself would never think for adopting. These orders were intercepted by the Senior Officer, and the Rear-Admiral commanding the squadron, and were only stopped when the matter was reported to him.

These cases might be multiplied, but those cited are sufficient to show the growth of insubordination and disregard for authority that is spreading in our Navy. The instances cited were in each instance summarily checked; but the mistaken efforts of misinformed people, who think that they are defending the oppressed in aiding the present move of the so-called staff, is calculated to impose a burden upon the shoulders of officers who are forced to command which will be hard to bear.

I would refrain beyond measure if I could find the TIMES right on this question, as I generally find it just on most others.

Resumption of Specie Payments.

Believing that even the crudest ideas may at times lead able minds to the development of measures beneficial to the general welfare, I send you the following suggestions, upon which it seems to me some plan could be devised, calculated to bring about a gradual but certain and speedy resumption of specie payments.

That the American people are determined honestly to redeem every financial obligation incurred during the war is, I take it, a fact recognized now even by the most violent repudiator. But if our creditors doubt our solvency and depreciate our paper, we as a nation have at least the same right as individuals would have under similar circumstances, to avail ourselves of their shortsighted lack of faith, and to purchase our promises to pay, always fairly and in open market, at whatever value is placed upon them, and which yields us an advantage.

Now the percentage of our credit, and therefore the actual momentary value of our currency is, it seems to me, justly represented by the price our bonds command in gold in foreign markets. On this well-rounded presumption, that the Legal-tender act be so modified as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to give notice, in the same manner as is now pursued for the sale of gold or for the purchase of bonds, weekly, or as often as may seem necessary, that for a stated period, or until further notice, the Treasury will receive legal tenders in payment of duties, at a rate to be fixed by the market quotations for purposes of negotiable trade only, or an equivalent rate to be fixed on the above principle. Our five-twenty bonds, which represent the bulk of our indebtedness, [illegible] the market, which is one [illegible] of our security in establishing a rate [illegible] purposes, difference of [illegible] and the value of bonds over [illegible] being interest-bearing [illegible] considerations, the several [illegible] of our currency [illegible] represent the value of our [illegible] and worth [illegible] gold at the above [illegible] rate.

Under such a policy [illegible] would be inevitably compelled to a [illegible] corresponding change in the [illegible] of our currency [illegible] the times for [illegible] the time extend [illegible] the rate of legitimate trade would be [illegible] fair, and speculators would have no object, of course, to force its price above the Assay [illegible] the Treasury was ready to give [illegible] gold in gold would cease, all there is [illegible] would come into free circulation [illegible] the trade, and the Treasury would [illegible] full there of it. But to secure a [illegible] balance, beyond contingencies, the [illegible] should have a right to order that a certain [illegible] should be applied [illegible] would be [illegible].

The early fluctuation of specie [illegible] would be [illegible] not the [illegible] to speculate on an average rise in the value of our paper of from one-half to one per cent. per month, and thus lead us to an equalization of our paper and gold values in from one to two years, in a gradual and almost imperceptible manner. Furthermore, this system of equalized [illegible] would be made efficient for the national banks as well, and then it would of necessity extend itself to the entire mercantile community, in the equalization and settlement of all contracts based on gold, in fixing the market value of stocks, all dealings in gold, and, and would enable foreign dealers to make their calculations in our currency with a great degree of accuracy, while placing a check upon the changes of such remarkable character as discussed our financial markets in September last.

And the gradual assimilation of values should be aided by a tax of reduction of the absurdly high rates, and the equalization of all mechanical labor, the primary cause of all high prices, and which, together with the monopolists' legislation, is constantly and surely reducing the already limited number of our manufactures, which we are still able to place in competition with foreign goods in other markets than our own, where the manufacturing trades are so well nurtured that they more definitely spread the most sanguine expectations of their dear old daddy, E. G. L. L. E.

ILLICIT WHISKEY OPERATIONS.

Alleged Heavy Frauds by Distillers—Half a Million of Dollars Involved—Warrants Issued Against an Alderman and Several Others.

Brief mention was made in the TIMES of yesterday of the fact that information had been furnished to the United States District-Attorney, by an ex-Louisiana Judge, in regard to certain enormous whisky frauds. The name of the informer was WARWICK MARTIN, formerly a member of the same Church which President GRANT's father attended, and as intimate friend of the latter. An affidavit was made by him, corroborated by a number of other persons, in which, among others, ELLERY, JAMES PARKER, LEWIS BARBERGER, PHILIP LOWENSTEIN, ADOLPH EBANY and E. S. BANNERMAN were charged with having run off large quantities of whisky from a distillery in Eighteenth-street, between Tenth and Eleventh-avenues, of which they are the joint proprietors, in an illicit manner. Warrants were subsequently issued for the arrest of the accused by Commissioner OSBORN. HARKER, one of the defendants, was arrested, and before the Board of Aldermen, voluntarily surrendered himself yesterday morning, and was subsequently held to $5,000 bail to appear for examination, Justice MCCUNN, of the Superior Court, becoming his bondsman. The other parties have not yet been captured, and some fear is felt lest they should escape, in consequence of the premature announcement of some of the facts in the case.

It is alleged that the illicit operations extended over a period of eight months—September, October, November and December, 1871, and January, February, March and April, 1872.

The affidavit of MARTIN gives the number of gallons of whisky made in the distillery in each of the months named, and the amount of tax, at the rate of $2 per gallon, paid during those months, as follows:

September, 21,000 gallons; tax, $42,000. No tax paid. October, 24,000 gallons; tax paid, $48,000. November, 22,000 gallons; tax paid, $44,000. December, 24,000 gallons; tax paid, $48,000. January, 24,000 gallons; tax paid, $48,000. February, 21,000 gallons; tax paid, $42,000. March, 22,000 gallons; tax paid, $44,000. April, 20,000 gallons; tax paid, $39,264 80; tax paid, $39,264 80; tax paid, $39,264 80; tax paid, $39,264 80. The affidavit states that the taxes for the period named is being collected that the liquor on which the taxes were not paid, was run off in the dead and stinking manner, and then branded, and branded with a brand, counterfeited, stolen, after which it was put upon the market and sold."

Departure of a Vessel with a Peculiar Cargo.

Among the clearances from this port yesterday was the bark John Edney, Captain HOPKINS, BUTMAN BROTHERS, agents, bound for Hayti, with a strange cargo. The vessel is a rickety affair, and had been lying at Wetmore's Dock, Brooklyn. Her manifest showed the following strange list of cargo: 500 bales hay, 100 barrels beef, 4,000 pounds tallow, 3,400 bags shot, 6 gun-carriages.

The Custom House authorities, suspecting the cargo, had her examined; but no vessel appeared who she should be consigned.

Impudent Police Changes.

Some time ago, Captain THOMAS SYCKES, then of the Twenty-eighth Police Precinct, but now of the Second, was tried by the Commissioners for neglect of duty in failing to associate the true character and antecedents of one MATHIAS MCCOSKAR, a convicted felon, who was inadvertently appointed a patrolman; at a subsequent meeting of the Board of Police two of the Commissioners voted to dismiss Captain SYKES from the Department and two against it, so that no decision was reached, and the man has since remained in that condition. Yesterday it was currently rumored and generally believed at the Central Police Office that Captain SYKES had tendered his resignation to take effect on the 1st day of February, and that it will be accepted by the Board. Sergeant CHARLES MCDONALD, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, will be appointed to fill the vacancy thus created.

THE SOLDIERS PROVIDED FOR.

A Home for Needy Veterans—Provision for their Comfort on Ward's Island.

It is said that "Republics are Ungrateful," and the saying would seem to be founded on truth, when we take into consideration the vast number of maimed veterans of the late war who are to-day presenting through the agents of various Northern cities begging for the necessities of life. New-York has its full quota of this unfortunate class.

During the past year an effort was made by a few females, ladies of this City, to establish a home for crippled soldiers, but their laudable efforts failed for want of funds. The Almshouse on Blackwell's Island was filled with poverty-stricken and armless and one-legged soldiers as early as November last, and so rapidly were they sent thither by the Police Justices to whom they applied for assistance, that the quietest men attached the attention of the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, who held a special meeting on the 17th of November, and caused to be issued the following order:

Ordered, That the Warden of the Almshouse cause contiguous wards to be fitted up for such as shall have certificates of honorable discharge, or who, to his satisfaction, shall show that they were honorably discharged from the services of the United States, and while in the line of duty; and that they be provided with wooden legs, crutches, or other appliances for the comfort of inmates of the Almshouse, and that they be treated the same as that of the inmates of the Incurable Hospital.

Immediately after the promulgation of this order the sick and the various cripples were put on Blackwell's Island were furnished with comfortable rooms and were transferred to the Incurable Hospital, where they were assigned towards entirely separate from those of the patients of that institution, until suitable apartments could be provided elsewhere.

In the month of December the Commissioners selected the east wing of the Inebriate Asylum on Ward's Island as the proper home for the soldiers, and, after making considerable alterations in the building, transferred them to that institution, where they remain, under the charge of Dr. FISHER.

They appear to be contented with their lot, and are treated with kindness by Dr. FISHER and the Commissioners. Rooms are to be fitted up for 150 more, so that there is every prospect that the number of worn-out destitute soldiers on the season will be speedily decreased.

FILTHY STREETS.

Startling Report From Dr. Harris—Red Tape and the Public Health.

The fact that the streets of this City are in a very filthy condition, is one within the personal knowledge of almost every citizen. It is also matter of general notoriety that their present condition is a consequence of the neglect of the contractors for cleaning the streets, of whom JOHN L. BROWN is chief and "manager," who are paid $400,000 per annum for doing the work, but exhaust their energies in drawing their pay.

This general knowledge of a lamentable fact has been emphasized by a remarkable report made by Sanitary Superintendent HARRIS to the Board of Health, but not yet acted upon by that body. In this document Dr. HARRIS states that he feels it to be his duty to call the attention of the Board to the unusually filthy condition of the streets, the particles of which are mostly engendered by the open and damp Winter, which is the most remarkable in those respects of any season for twenty years past. The weather being in itself unhealthful, the condition of the streets tends strongly to promote the epidemic forms of disease, and some action of the Board is imperatively demanded. The sanitary inspectors, Dr. HARRIS declares, that

The Process of "Giving Life to Mining Stocks"—An Unsentimental "Funeral" and Resuscitation—Decision of Judge McCunn.

In the case of TITUS B. ELDERIDGE vs. SAMUEL C. REED, some time since argued in Superior Court, General Term, a decision has been rendered holding the Colombian Mining Company entirely free from the charge of having an obligation entered into for the furnishing of a "goal" in mining stocks, where those obligations have passed into innocent hands. The following statement of facts and opinion of the Court, by Judge McCUNN, will be found interesting not only as the facts it discusses, but also in the law applicable to such transactions. UNITED STATES TREASURY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 20, 1870.

We believe that general regret will be felt by the Insurance interest of this State at the removal of Mr. WILLIAM BARNES, for party reasons, as Superintendent of the Insurance Department of New-York. Mr. BARNES came into office on the institution of the Department eight or ten years ago. Although a Scotch-law of Mr. THURLOW WEED and with other influential political connections, his appointment was unclouded by his friends, and he was nominated to this new and responsible office as the right man in the place that needed good men for its delicate administration. He has never been disturbed for any cause whatever by either party in the Executive control at Albany until the present time. The place, which is susceptible of being made one of party patronage and (by no great stretch of conscience, perhaps,) large favoritism, is needed by the triumphant Democracy, and has been given to a gentleman of Rochester, of whose divided duty to his party and to the insurance interest committed to his charge, we shall be able to judge in a year or two by the fruits of his administration.

The New-York and Hamburg Steamship Company have acted a sensible part in accepting the United States Mails for Europe, on the same terms as the Williams-Guion and the Bremen Companies. This arrangement secures to Postmaster CHENEY's three mails per week from New-York, Tuesdays by the Hamburg steamers, Thursdays (after this week) by the Williams-Guion, and Saturdays by the Bremen steamers. All these lines are amply provided with first-class steamers, and both the German-American lines, of tested speed, while there is every probability that the Williams-Guion vessels, now that they carry the Mails, will be brought up to the average time heretofore made by the Inman-Dale and the Cunard steamers. The Postmaster-General is to be congratulated upon his success in this affair, against powerful difficulties interposed at the outset, and much feeling throughout his negotiations.

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Company last June, authority was voted to the Directors to raise about $1,100,000 on new Capital or otherwise to pay off the maturing mortgage of $1,000,000 of the original Rock Island Company, and $100,000 of the Rock Island Bridge Company, and also to complete the ballasting and equipment of the Des Moines extension of the road. Notification of this power was, we understand, given to the Stock Exchange last Summer. It now transpires that the new Stock was made in season for registration for the last October Dividend, that Dividend having been paid on $17,000,000, in place of $16,000,000 of Capital. The Bears in the Stock made the most of this discovery to-day, and from 108¼@109 at one time on Tuesday last, the price was down to 105@104¾ to-day.

Hon. JOHN ROSS, of the Banking House of Messrs. MORTON, ROSS & CO., London, and Messrs. MORTON, ROSE & CO., New-York, has been knighted by the Queen of England for eminent services in the Government of Canada, and especially in the direction of its finances. He is now Sir JOHN ROSS, Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael, &c.

It is positively denied by the late President of the Tenth National Bank that any such sum as forty millions of dollars per day was certified for SMITH, GOULD, FISK & CO., during the Gold speculations of September, as reported from the Committee Room at Washington through one of the Boston papers. It is proper to add that the Bank was not named in that rumor, but it seems to have been taken for granted that the Tenth National was referred to. The late Cashier of the Bank, who was before the Committee at Washington, denies that he named any such sum as the gross certifications of the Bank on any one day for all its dealers together.

The following silly telegram was printed this afternoon:

MEMPHIS, TENN., Jan. 20.—The Southern people are smoking with indignation at the decision of the United States Supreme Court of the United States. While the products of other States are not subject to tax, the products of cotton, and the products of Louisiana, part of cotton, and their products in Kentucky. The decision will have an important bearing on the next election.

This is a bald hoaxing on its very face. The Cotton tax was repealed long since. It was a [illegible] money and equitable tax at the time, and much needed by the Treasury, and was subsequently borne cheerfully as an act of magnanimity to the Southern planters. There is certainly a remote doubt that the validity of the tax will be affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and if it is, it may be taken for granted that not a single bale less will be planted next Spring in apprehension of its resuscitation.

The report is current to-day that the Milwaukee and St. Paul Directors who declared the Cash and Common Scrip Dividends yesterday, announced in our last report, must first receive the approval of the Stockholders of the Company, before enlarging their Common Stock in satisfaction of the Scrip part of those Dividends. The Lands offered for sale by the Des Moines Valley Railway Company of Iowa have already been located and patented to the extent of 800,000 acres to the Company by the State by virtue of the original Congressional grant. About 100,000 acres additional will be patented on the completion of the road to Fort Dodge. The card of Hon. CHARLES FOMEROY, of Iowa, in the Tribune this morning, does gross injustice to the good faith of the Company in omitting to state that a large proportion of the grant has already been patented.

We learn that the Stock Exchange Board have appointed a Committee to investigate and report upon the removed recent issue of new Capital by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Company. The result will probably turn upon the sufficiency of notice to the Stock Exchange and the public by the publication of the proceedings of the annual meeting of Stockholders in June last.

The New-York Mutual Marine Insurance Company have declared a Scrip Dividend of forty ₱ cent. on the earned premiums for 1869, amounting to $297,667. The certificates of 1869 are ordered paid off in cash. The present assets of the Company amount to $757,000, of which $300,000 is in United States Stocks, and $165,000 in City Bank and other stocks.

Messrs. JACQUELIN & DE COFFET, No. 18 New-street, offer for sale a limited number of the eight ₱ cent. convertible equipment bonds of the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railway Company. These bonds, which are secured by a sinking fund, have only ten years to run, and are convertible at any time into the common stock of the Company.

The New-Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company has declared a Semi-annual Dividend of five ₱ cent., free of tax, payable Feb. 1.

BANKING HOUSE OF FISK & HATCH, No. 5 BANKER, NEW-YORK, January, 1870.

☞ OUR SALES OF THIS STREET MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, having been more rapid than the preparation of the Bonds for issue, owing to the tardiness of Mr. William E. Barron, one of the Trustees of the Mortgage, the supply of Bonds for delivery was exhausted about Jan. 1, since which time we have been unable to fill orders except by subscription for subsequent delivery.

The Bonds for the remainder of the Loan, amounting to $700,000, have now come to hand.

Of this amount, $[illegible] have already been sold by subscription, leaving but $[illegible] of the entire Loan of $2,000,000 now to be disposed of.

The rapidity with which nearly $1,300,000 of the Loan have been taken, during the short period since it was first introduced on the market, affords greatly gratifying evidence of the favor with which it has been received, and the rank which it has assumed among first-class investments.

The balance of the Loan will be sold upon the others first received, at the original price, viz., 90 and accrued interest from Jan. 1, in currency.

Subscribers wishing to allow the closing of the Loan, or in excess of the amount of Bonds for sale, will be promptly returned, or otherwise invested, as the parties may direct.

The full market rate will be allowed on Government securities, in exchange, as heretofore.

FISK & HATCH, Bankers, &c.

☞ DES MOINES VALLEY RAILROAD EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT MORTGAGE BONDS.

The undersigned offer for sale a limited amount of the above-named bonds. They are receivable at par by the Company in payment for any of the lands sold at scheduled prices. The lands are pledged for the redemption of the bonds, and consist of 400,000 acres of choice locations, situated mostly in the Des Moines Valley, (Iowa,) and are estimated to realize enough to nearly or quite cancel the whole issue of bonds, in addition to the security of the Road. Price, 90 per cent. For further particulars inquire of ☞ SECOND EDITION READY. THE REFERENCE BOOK, ISSUED BY THE MERCANTILE AGENCY OF DUN, BARLOW & CO. (Second Edition) is now ready, including all the business changes from the 1st to 1st January, 1870. This work contains the names, estimates of capital and credit of 351,000 merchants, bankers, traders, &c., marked from detailed reports received at our offices, which subscribers to the book have the privilege of constantly consulting. These reports are continuously revised, and are the only ones relied upon by the largest and most influential houses in each trade. We have pleasure in explaining to all those who subscribe and the positions we possess for giving parties to deal with to whom it is safe to sell and when it is vice versa.

DUN, BARLOW & CO., Proprietors, No. 335 Broadway, New-York.

☞ THE CENTRAL RAILROAD OF IOWA offers its First Mortgage Seven per Cent. Gold Bonds at 90, free of tax. Many parties who have carefully examined the merits of these securities prefer them to any other in the market. They are now selling quite as rapidly as the Company can use the money in finishing the road. Pamphlets and full information may be obtained, and subscriptions will be received, at the Company's offices, No. 13 Pine-street, New-York, at the Bank of North America, No. 44 Wall-street, and at HOWES & MACY'S, No. 30 Wall-street.

W. B. SHATTUCK, Treasurer.

☞ A CARD. Having learned that there is a report in circulation to the effect that our house has failed, we beg to assure our friends that said report is utterly without foundation, and that our business is in a healthy condition. We also beg to state that the report alluded to.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A new cable, in the interest of the French Company, has been successfully laid between England and Brest, France. The English shore end was completed on Wednesday night....The death of Deputy RASPAIL is officially denied.... The French Ministry have decided to propose that henceforth offenses of the Press shall be tried by a jury, but as the proposition cannot become a law for some time, ROCHEFORT will not receive the benefit of it, as his trial is soon to take place. The radical journals charge the Government with pressing his arraignment, so as to avoid the operation of the proposed law.....The London Times of yesterday devotes four columns to a review of Mrs. BROWN's new book on the Byron scandal....Another committee has been completed and announced in the Ecumenical Council, named, "On Eastern Rites and Apostolic Missions."....Cardinal ANTONELLI has assured the French Ambassador that the Pope will maintain as equal the rights of Church and State....The correspondence between Count BISMARCK and Minister BURLINGAME has been published in Berlin. Prussia wants Imperialism restored throughout China as a guarantee of order and of safety to foreigners....The Italian Parliament has been summoned to meet on the 7th of March next.

CONGRESS.

At the opening of the Senate yesterday the statue of General NATHANIEL GREENE, of Revolutionary fame, was formally presented to Congress by Senator ANTHONY, in the name of the State of Rhode Island, and he took occasion to address the Senate on the life and character of the old hero. Messrs. SUMNER, SAWYER and MORRILL followed Mr. ANTHONY. Concurrent resolutions were adopted accepting the statute and thanking the Governor of the State and the people for the valuable gift. Several new bills were introduced, among them one incorporating a Telegraph Postal Company with peculiar duties and powers. The Virginia bill was taken up and a long debate ensued, but without final action upon it the Senate, at 3:35 P. M., adjourned. It was, however, agreed that to-day at 4 P. M. the vote should be taken.

In the House a petition was presented signed by 29,000 citizens of Utah, praying for admission as a State. A number of bills, the majority of them of no public importance, were introduced. One, offered by Mr. BINGHAM, provides for making it a penal offence for any person to propose to repeal the action of a State Legislature in ratifying any proposed constitutional amendment. Among the resolutions was one declaring the absence of constitutional authority in making treaties which involve the absorption of foreign territory, without the consent of the House. The League Island Navy Yard bill was taken up and discussed during the morning hour; Mr. SCOFIELD spoke at length in reply to the recent speech of Mr. DAWES on this subject. In Committee of the Whole the West Point Academy bill was considered. An amendment for adding two Senators and three Representatives to the Board of Visitors was agreed to, and the bill was then reported to the House and there passed. A resolution reported from the Printing Committee in regard to printing a large number of the reports of the Special Commissioner of Revenue, led to a long discussion on the subject of tariff versus free trade, in which a general interchange of views took place. The House refused to table the resolution by a vote of 85 to 126, and under the previous question it was adopted without a division. At 4:30 the House adjourned.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the annual report of the Prison Association was received and ordered printed. Mr. MURPHY reported the bill to revise the Statutes of the State; and Mr. CAULDWELL introduced a bill allowing the construction of certain railways in the City and County of New-York and across the Harlem River. The bill chartering the Lenox Library was passed. The bill to repeal the New-York City Excise law was considered in Committee of the Whole, and progress reported. Mr. CREMIEN gave notice of a bill to repeal the act creating the Metropolitan Police District, and providing for the election of three Police Commissioners in New-York. But little business of general interest was transacted, and the Senate adjourned.

In the Assembly, of the bills reported, was one allowing the construction of new gas works in this City. A series of resolutions in favor of Cuba were also reported, but, on motion of Mr. MITCHELL, they were recommitted. Among the bills introduced were the following: to repeal the act exempting ministers from taxation; to set apart a portion of the Brooklyn Park for the Twenty-third Regiment New-York National Guard; for the election of a Commissioner and the establishment of a Police force in Brooklyn; to repeal the act to prevent cruelty to animals in New-York; to extend Irving-place in this City in a southerly direction; to sell the Seamen's Retreat at Staten Island; to regulate the brokerage business, and to locate a new State Prison and remove the one at Sing Sing. A resolution to pay in gold the State debt, incurred prior to 1862, was referred. The resolution in regard to the Committee to attend the Peabody obsequies was amended so as to consist of three Senators and five members of the House. A motion was agreed to that the Committee pay its own expenses. The Senate bill incorporating the Lenox Library was passed.

GENERAL.

Mexican advices by the way of Mazatlan and San Francisco, Cal., show an unsettled state of public affairs. Revolutions in several States, it is said, are imminent, and the hatred of Mexicans towards foreigners is represented to be intense. LOZADA had raised his standard at Tepic, and a convention had been called for the 19th inst., to form general laws for the Government.

A cable dispatch from London states that the advices from Rio Janeiro to the 31st ult. are to the effect that LOPEZ has again taken the field in Paraguay with a force of 5,000 whites and 15,000 Indians, and stopped the advance of Brazilian troops.

Ex-Secretary SEWARD was serenaded on Tuesday evening at Havana by the different volunteer battalions. Colonel ZULUETA made a speech of welcome, to which Mr. SEWARD briefly replied. In his remarks he was strictly noncommittal on the subject of the insurrection.

Ten of the Spanish gunboats recently arrived at Havana, according to a dispatch from that city, have again put to sea, but their destination is unknown.

The Society of California Pioneers is about to erect a building for the use of the association in San Francisco.

The Chinese quarter in the Town of San Jose, Cal., was destroyed by fire on Saturday last, and 1,000 of the inhabitants were rendered homeless.

A severe earthquake shock was felt at San Bernardino, Cal., on the 14th inst.

The verdict of the jury in the case of WARREN FELLOWS, charged with the murder of SWINTON, at Port Jervis, was murder in the second degree, and the prisoner was sentenced to State Prison for twenty years.

The Kline Iron Works, OAKLEY, CLAPP & CO., proprietors, located at Horseheads, six miles from Elmira, this State, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Loss, $30,000; insurance, $18,000.

DENRY has proposed to RUDOLPH, of Chicago, to play for the champion billiard cue in San Francisco, on the 15th of next month, and to pay RUDOLPH's expenses. If this proposition is not accepted, the game will be played in this City on the 8th of April.

Advices from the Sandwich Islands to the 4th inst., have been received at San Francisco, by the Idaho, from Honolulu. The Austrian Embassy to China were among the passengers. They had been received by the King at the latter city. Dr. HOFFMAN has been appointed Austrian Consul. A terrific gale visited the islands recently, and the Austrian frigate Donau was cast ashore.

It is again asserted in San Francisco that the Central Pacific Railroad has purchased the California Pacific Road for $6,000,000.

The Peril to American Credit Abroad.

One swallow does not make a Summer, but we are apt to think of Summer weather when the swallows are in the sky. So when our English friends see FISK and GOULD careering over the financial horizon, we must not be surprised at their apprehensions. Nothing is more conservative than money. The instinct of gain is based upon security, and when security trembles, credit dies. The disheartening fact is that the credit of England is twice as good as that of the United States, while her resources are not proportionately larger and do not compare with our own in prospective development. Brother Jonathan is rich, and will be richer; but he has an ill name, and when he goes into foreign exchanges is no higher repute than a Russian or a Brazilian. Not only is England's paper twice as good, but his credit does not rank with that of mercurial, unsteady France. He may point to his mines and cotton fields, and mighty possessions, and dwell with exultation upon the glory and power and wealth that must there find future dominion. There will be one answer: "We have no money to lend at English rates to a people whose railway magnate is FISK, and we want good interest before advancing credit to a people who are in the habit of discussing repudiation!"

We may rebel at this, but we cannot very well question it. Honest men will say: "This Erie dominion is an accident. Its rulers are outcasts. Good men do not deal with them. They have no standing in the street. No bankes will lend a dollar on their bonds, or buy their shares except at a fancy price." All of this is true, but unfortunately foreign merchants do not gauge their commercial estimate of people by the ethics of the counting house. They only see Governors, Judges, the Press, and men in high station, all combining to aid FISK and GOULD in doing with impunity what would lead to transportation in England and to the galleys in France. They remember Mississippi and repudiation, and they have read in stately and specious rhetoric President JOHNSON's argument in favor of dishonoring the national debt! They hear a noisy and vigilant party avowing repudiation! They distrust our large rates of interest. A people that will charge each other ten and fifteen per cent. for money even when money is easy, must have reasons making it unsafe to lend at five or six per cent. Sir CURTIS LAMPSON gave the best cause for foreign distrust when he arraigned Governor HOFFMAN for signing that most iniquitous Erie bill—a bill, which construed into plain English, should have been called "An act for legalizing robbery, fraud, and false pretence, and for perpetuating in the hands of men guilty of these offences their ill-gotten power." It was a bill which violated the moral sense of the community, and could only have one effect abroad. That effect was to paralyze and depreciate all private American credit with foreign merchants.

American credit is dethroned in foreign markets! We may take the best railway bonds to France and England and Germany, and we cannot sell them at their true value. Now and then we may dispose of securities worth intrinsically a hundred cents on the dollar, bearing large interest, and as secure as any in the world, for one-half or two-thirds of their real value. That is not a sale, but a sacrifice! It is the penalty we must pay for legalizing highway robbery. Somehow the moneyed world gets back to rude Indian notions in its business affairs. Because one white man robbed an Indian of his game and his ponies, and escaped without being scalped, it is the Indian's purpose to exact the scalps of all other white men who come in his way. So we receive Indian courtesy when we go abroad with our bonds and mortgages. Men see that the Erie Railway was, in the beginning, a noble enterprise, well-conceived, full of profit, and promising benefit to New-York and the country. They know that when it was built our best people invested their means with its projectors as a national duty. They saw it drift into the hands of gamblers, adventurers and knaves. They saw it pass step by step through degrading and disheartening influences,—from the hands of men like Mr. DREW, who merely used it to make money, without entirely ignoring vested rights,—into the hands of the present directors, who regard it as their own tenement and preserve, and consider no rights but those of unlawful possession. They see that this shameful misappropriation and seizure of property is by the direct aid of the Courts. In all countries, no matter what form of government, Justice is property's last and sacred asylum. "The King dare not take my barn," said an old German peasant to a menacing agent of FREDERICK, who insisted he must sell. "And why," was the answer, "is His Majesty not all powerful?" "Yes, but I will appeal to the High Court in Berlin!" And it is said the despot was well pleased to know that under his stern government the ministers of law retained majesty and commanded respect. Here, in free America, we have no such assurance! The Masters of Erie not only have a Legislature to proclaim their decrees, and a Governor to execute them, but when outraged property flies for succor to supreme and holy Justice—sitting in serene and sweet benignity high over railway and representatives and Chief Magistrate—Justice is found in the cushioned and tapestried cloisters of the Masters' gaudy opera house—flushed with wine and good fellowship—and eager to sign their writs and do their bidding. All of this we have seen in the shameful history of the Erie Railroad. What its masters have done with that noble franchise other men may do with any railroad in America—for HOFFMAN is Governor and BARNARD is upon the bench, and leading lawyers' eloquent lips still move to golden retainers, and men go to Albany in 1870 of the same bone and marrow as MARTOON and his fellow corfiies, who clustered around JAY GOULD and his "black bag" in 1868 and 1869. Can we say to Sir CURTIS LAMPSON and our friends in London that what we see to-day in the management of Erie we may not see to-morrow in the management of any other road? Do we not know that the Masters of Erie are masters of the Executive, the Judiciary and the Legislature, and that with this imperial trinity they are puissant and aggressive? What they have done they may do. They have conquered Erie, and to-morrow they may covet our richest franchise. Rob Roy would have pillaged all the way to London City, if he could have had safe conduct from the King, and been secure of an injunction against his victims when he reached Westminster.

Should we marvel that with this fearful example our credit should be sick and forlorn and utterly despised in foreign markets? Is it not pitiful that honest men with good securities should be taxed and punished by foreign money lenders because of FISK and GOULD and their troupe of Governors and Judges and negro minstrels and dancing women? With us is the cause,—and with us is the remedy. We cannot keep a house of infamy, and expect to be free from reproach. We elect this Governor and these Judges, and we permit the Governor to look with hopeful and not altogether uncertain eyes upon the Presidency. We surround them with the organization of a powerful and, perhaps, dominant party. We say to the world,—it is not impossible that he who did the bidding of the Masters of Erie, even to confirming them in the possession of stolen goods and chattels, may one day be President of the United States! We gave you ANDREW JOHNSON, who wished to repudiate the debt, and we may give you JOHN T. HOFFMAN, who will probably put BARNARD in the place of Mr. CHASE, and make GOULD the receiver of as many roads as he cares to manage. Such things are possible so long as the people are silent. But while we submit in silence should we complain because our silence is misunderstood in other lands, and men hesitate to believe in a responsibility we are too weak or too apathetic to sustain?

It is painful to write this! The thoughts it suggests are full of shame and grief. American Credit is dying abroad, because we have permitted ruffians to slay it at home. There is but one remedy, and even at the best it is—slow and bitter. Shall we adopt it?

What Democratic "Economy" Means—Increase of Salaries.

The first fruits of the Tammany policy in this State are before us, in the shape of a wholesale measure for "increasing salaries." We in the City of New-York are accustomed to the leading Ring ideas, prominent among which is the one just referred to. We had, of course, expected that when the paternal sway of Tammany should be extended over the whole State, and guide legislation at Albany as it has guided civic ordinances, some of its "institutions" would be transplanted. We confess, however, we did not expect quite so early a raid on the public money in the interests of party.

In his recent Message Governor HOFFMAN announced to the Legislature that "its special duty" was to "secure a more prudent, honest and economical home government." The Tammany way of going to work in this direction is to be found in the Assembly bill increasing the pay of all the employes in the different departments of the State Government. Governor HOFFMAN was specially indignant at the "costly body of officials" whom he charged the National Government with employing. And we suppose that he gives support to this bill—nation is the additional bill promised us by Mr. JACOBS for increasing the wages of all the laborers employed by the State.

Seriously, is not this thing carried far enough? And has not the Democratic Party made a bid strong enough for the working-men's votes by the introduction of this scheme, without actually depleting the Treasury? For, of course, it is merely a bid for votes, and a more direct and palpable one has not lately been made. It is the old Tammany policy over again,—to increase the patronage power at its disposal, and to buy the services of so many more henchmen, by using not their own money, but the people's money, for the purpose. It is as easy to be profuse with public funds, generosity is so easy with other people's money, that the device is neither a new nor a great one; but it is one which the Democracy have already made sufficiently familiar to us without carrying it to further extremes.

One of the main ideas of the leaders of the Democracy this Winter seems to be to so legislate as not, at least, to lose any votes. Governor HOFFMAN's Message skillfully "touched the popular pulse" by appealing to several special classes, and the legislation thus far seems to have had an eye to the same end. But, after all, this friendly, money-voting policy has its drawbacks. As the number to be benefited by increasing salaries is very small, and the number to be made indignant by it is very great, we doubt whether as a scheme for catching votes it is likely to prove successful. It is the old question, whether the people who pay taxes are most to be conciliated, or the people who hold offices and draw salaries. The bill now in the Assembly and the one about to be offered, seem to have chosen the latter class as the first to be experimented upon; but we believe with our Albany correspondent that "perhaps the workingmen who are not so fortunate as to be in the State's employ, will fail to see the point of this legislative joke." Meanwhile, we wait with curiosity to see what shape the Tammany desire for "economy" will take next in raiding upon the public Treasury.

Mr. Cassius M. Clay on the Modern Press.

If anything could make us sympathize with "poor Cuba" more thoroughly than we have hitherto done, it would be the conduct of her avowed champions. They fall upon her neck in pretended friendship, only to give her a secret stab in the back. As we cordially wish to see the independence party succeed, we entreat it to get rid of nearly all its present advocates. One set persists in throwing mud at the Secretary of State, and in mumbling over a stupid series of slanders on his family connections—slanders which have no grit or novelty to recommend them, and which, as everybody knows, have been unanswerably disproved. What is the effect of this? Naturally to create astonishment that the Cubans should be so shamefully unscrupulous in choosing their instruments. But still greater wrongs have been done to the insurgents. Public meetings have been called in their name, and every true friend of Cuba has been covered with mortification to witness the result. The public have held aloof. Leading men of all classes have naturally imitated their example. What miserable infatuation was it which led to a repetition of the farce on Wednesday night? People know all about it by this time, and only one new actor appeared to give variety to the melancholy performance. There is Cuba, bound to the rock, while the Spanish dragon prepares to swallow her at a mouthful. We hold our breath with expectation. Is there no one to save her? We are told to go to Cooper Institute, and the secrets of fate shall be revealed to us. Of course, we repair to the abode of the oracle, and what do we behold? A well-known journalist in the chair, like the seraph that sits up aloft, and Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY panting with eagerness to distinguish himself as the Porsena of the nineteenth century.

We must say for the Chairman that he evidently meant to do no harm. His remarks were of an artless and innocent character, and except that he has taught us elsewhere that it is very wicked to differ in any respect from any member of the Administration, we should admire his firmness in proclaiming the principle that it is "the privilege and right of the American people to instruct their Government"—except, we suppose, on financial subjects. But after the lamb there enters the lion. Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY is the most formidable friend any cause could well have. Need we say that he began his speech upon Cuba by giving the audience a complete retrospect of his past life? That is the inevitable overture to a performance by Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY, the "terror of princes." Has he not cast proud defiance at the despots of the universe? He has been absent eight years. What change does he find? Why, "the image of King GEORGE has been removed, and the portrait of GEORGE WASHINGTON hangs at the door." And that metamorphosis has been effected in eight years, a period during which Mr. CLAY modestly declares that he has grown "older if not wiser." It is the common lot. Comparatively few people do grow wiser as they grow older, and therefore Mr. CLAY need not think that he is sitting alone on the stool of repentance.

What is the first topic to discuss when a man has to make a speech on Cuba? Manifestly the perfidy of England and the incompetency of Mr. SEWARD, considered in their connection with Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY's unparalleled services to his countrymen and their ingratitude towards him. There we have a fine field for thought. The first step towards the deliverance of the Cuban Andromeda, is the canonization of her Kentucky Perseus. Does any one want to hear Mr. CLAY's "case" in a few words? Here it is, quoted literally from the Tribune: "Why, Sir, I recall a most illustrious passage in English history, the liberating of the slaves and now when following under our leadership and advice it has been again in season and out of season. That, fellow citizens, is my defence, if that be a defence." There is no "if" in the matter. What Mr. CLAY are quite willing to certify that he is not guilty.

The removal of King GEORGE's statue is not the only event of the past eight years. President GRANT has disappeared. "I have here, Sir," said Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY, "an extract from the late President GRANT's message." The audience laughed—so did the people when Rip Van Winkle came back to his native place. But presently the audience began to hiss, as well as laugh, and under that trial, Mr. CLAY lost his presence of mind—if it be not profane to suppose such a thing possible. He touched subject after subject, but the company would not listen. They wanted to hear something about Cuba. The reason of their discontent, we need hardly explain, was that they were not in the secret. They were not aware that they had been invited to listen to a few crotchets, and to hear a statement of personal grievances. What great man has not a grievance? The least we inferior creatures can do is to listen to it. Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY has done us all a favor in stating his wrongs, and we deeply regret that they have been reported in a totally unintelligible form. But what a mockery is the whole performance of "poor Cuba!" Could the bitterest malice go further? What sin have the Cubans committed to deserve this punishment? Might they not fairly plead to be allowed to fight out their battle in their own way, unencumbered by the "help" which is now dragging them down?

The Gas Nuisance and the Board of Health.

It is now nearly four years since the New-York gas supply became the subject of loud and earnest complaint. Ever since that time the companies have been continually charged with bad faith in the fulfillment of their contracts, and with a total indifference to public comfort and health. There were numerous investigations of the subject by officials and one by an Albany committee. The existing evils could not be denied, and they were capable of remedy. But the gas nuisance is as scandalous as ever, and the Board of Health has once more renewed the contest for its abatement.

The Metropolitan Company, it was announced at the last meeting of the Health Board, had abandoned all efforts to introduce new processes into their works, by which the quality of their gas might be improved. The other companies have not gone quite so far as this, but endeavor to befog the subject by representing improved methods of gas purification as something too doubtful and difficult for anything beyond mere discussion. The plea is absurd, as they very well know. The manufacture of gas is no new art, and the processes by which its purity can be assured were ascertained long ago. There is no such foul vapor, as New-York is compelled to breathe in the form of gas, in other cities. Nowhere but here are rooms lighted by it rendered poisonous. No logic, no bewildering scientific talk, or technical analyses, can get over the one fact, that other people have good and healthy gas, and New-York people have it not.

The Board of Health, however, still lives, although there is no knowing how long that can be said of it. It has a plain duty before it, from which we trust it will not shrink. The act by which the Board was created defines its office to be, among other things, "for the preservation of life and health." Such a powerful influence against both as impure gas comes within the range of its operations, just as clearly as the cleaning of tenement houses, or the encouragement of vaccination. It has earned the public gratitude by its activity in many ways, and it can earn still more by persistent effort, with all the legal power that it can use, to bring the wholesale poisoning of the City to an end.

The Journalists Millennium.

The public ought to be very proud of the journalism of the present day. It has reached an unexampled pitch of perfection. It spares no one, and it has a finger, to quote the homely adage, in everybody's pie. It tells us all about private affairs, and orders up women for punishment with quite as much boldness and courage as if they were men. Is it any wonder that those who make journalism what it is, claim to be ranked as a "profession," and exact the obsequious attentions of society?

The fact is that the journalist is not only the regenerator of the age, and the great reformer of manners, but he is in a fair way to sweep all the institutions of an exploded civilization before him. The world never can foresee the results of a great invention when it is first discovered. There were people who laughed at the steam engine, and treated the electric telegraph with contempt. So it is with that triumph of modern genius, the art of interviewing. Some affected persons pretend to hold up their hands in horror at it. Was there ever such a piece of nonsense? The "interviewer" is already as good as a Judge and better than a jury. If any one doubts it, let him ponder the story told by the Bangor correspondent of the Boston Post. There was a man in Maine who shot a woman. For this he was put into prison. He denied his guilt, but the reporter got him in his fearful grasp, and held him with his glittering eye, and squeezed the truth out of him. In France, as we showed yesterday, they let the President of a Court do the work. They order these things better in Maine.

The reporter asked the murderer, whose name was LAWRENCE, every question that he could think of bearing on the crime. Did he love the woman? How long had he loved her?—did he want to marry her?—when did you make up your mind to commit the horrid deed?—was he drunk at the time?—did he make up his mind to cut his own throat afterwards? These and other questions were put to the prisoner, and he answered them all. How could he do otherwise? He appreciated the power of the Press. He was aware that when we want news we will have it regardless of cost—and, of everything else. Lawrence felt that it was all over with him when a reporter entered the room. Does not the Press [illegible] and [illegible] all journalistic high-minded gentlemen? We should like to know where LAWRENCE could have found a better friend than the reporter. To be sure he is likely to be condemned on the confession extracted from him. But what is one man's life, or the principles of justice, when a great system is involved? If we journalists like to do the work of hangmen, what is to restrain us? Certainly not any squeamishness on our part. The truth is that we must keep up with the age. We are bound to distance each other, and to find a new "sensation" every morning. "Interviewing" is one of the means we employ to accomplish this end. Even in Maine it can find out the prisoner in his cell and make his miserable soul quake within him. Every journalist feels exalted in the presence of such splendid feats. We adjure our fellow laborers to go on. The day will come when we shall be honored above all other powers and potentates, and when people will regard our boots—even ours—with the affectionate adoration which they are now ready to lavish upon Prince ARTHUR's.

About the Weather.

For several weeks we have been passing through one of those abnormal seasons which appear to defy all human explanation. Not only at New-York, but throughout the continent, Nature's course seems disturbed. Central Virginia, a few nights ago, received, in thunder storms, the shock of the elements whose violence had been poured out in central Kentucky and Tennessee; and the storm in its night approach, according to telegraphic reports, to have swept northward over the lakes, and visited Buffalo. Our meteorologists are beginning to unravel the mysteries of these grand phenomena, and to approximate their conditions, and to map their course. But the long continuance of the present vernal weather seems inexplicable by any single storm or tempest, however violent. The great storm of March 14, 1869, which struck the coast first at Galveston, Texas, was only three days in making its march to the Lakes and to Nova Scotia. According to Professor DOVE, the distinguished German meteorologist, his country, a few years ago, experienced a remarkable Winter, enjoying a tropical temperature till the 8th or 10th of January, after which came intense cold. But the often-observed periodicity of remarkable weather, and the return in cycles of the great meteorological phenomena that alarm us by their infrequency, may, after all, be the solution of this singular Winter. There can be little doubt that Pharoah's dream of the fat and lean kine will hold good, in a modified sense, for all ages of time, if we can find a Joseph to interpret the dream, and to foretell the exact year of change. Some of our oldest citizens recall a Winter in New-York, not more than thirty years ago, opening as the present season has begun and so continuing till the equinoctial forces began their work late in February. May we not expect a similar season in the regular rotation of the climatic wheel?

The Ways and Means Committee is not alone in the "demoralization" occasioned by the demand of the people for reduced taxation. The Tribune shares the perplexity. Until the other day, it insisted that the present rate of taxation might be maintained without producing inconvenience or exciting discontent. Now it talks differently. It recommends officials who scoff at retrenchment as a matter of little moment to "inquire of the workingmen, manufacturers and farmers who pay the taxes." The advice is good, and we trust will be heeded by those who, though not adverse to retrenchment, urge the continuance of taxes to pay a debt not yet due. Let them inquire of those "who pay the taxes" what their opinion is on the subject. "Down with the Taxes" will be the response.

We exclude Nova Scotia Coal by the imposition of a heavy tax. But we send to Western Canada more coal than we ever received from Nova Scotia. If the Dominion, following our example, excludes Pennsylvania coal by enacting a Customs' duty, how much will the monopolists gain by the continuance of the Coal tax?

Mr. SCHENCK's resolution, determining doubts as to the legal duration of the present Income Tax law, may be very well as a means of obviating official difficulties. But the policy which seeks, by straining legal technicalities, to prolong a law whose rate is extravagant, and whose details sadly need revision, is very questionable. We favor the renewal of an income tax, reduced in rate, and rendered equitable in its operation. But that is a different thing from this attempt to benefit the Treasury at the cost of the tax payers by a sort of snap judgment.

Once upon a time a certain journal tried hard to persuade the people that a national debt is a national blessing. It championed the doctrine that a standing public debt is a good thing for investors and not a bad thing for the country. The same journal labors quite as zealously nowadays to prove that a national debt is a national curse—a curse so grievous that op pressive taxation to pay off the debt is vastly preferable. Better impoverish the people, cripple industry and embarrass trade than allow the debt to remain even until it matures—is the doctrine at this moment taught by the oracle. Can the Tribune wonder that the people rely on their own common sense rather than on its unstable financial philosophy?

How high Customs' duties sometimes serve to damage the industry they are supposed to protect, our Washington correspondent this morning explains. The "hide and leather interest" protests that it is "protected" almost unto death. It is so injured by the duty on Hides that the export trade of leather to Europe, and of the manufactures of leather to South America, has been lost. The Canadian manufacturers, who have no duty on hides to pay, beat us in the foreign market. For every fifty cents gained by the farmer in the higher price obtained for the hides he has to sell, he pays twenty-three dollars in the advanced price of boots and shoes, and other forms of manufactured leather.

The ladies of the Suffrage Association seem to be making good headway at Washington. There is an array of influential names about them and their cause, and the "lady lawyer" of Chicago, to speak figuratively, seems to stir along with the movement. We read of Madame Pomeroy, Claflin and Woodhull up with it, and also, singularly enough, a Bishop—Bishop Simpson. The ladies are to get at the President next; and, as he loves peace, he will, no doubt, be found to say something complimentary of a rather encouraging interview. They certainly mean business, and look only to the main point, as they showed when they turned to go out of their way to sympathize with Mrs. Sorosis. Brown is a lady who has been so worried and flouted by the gentlemen editors everywhere, and who will probably consider this notion of the strong-minded sisterhood "the most unkindest cut of all."

The Republican leaders in New-Hampshire cannot afford to indulge any league in their private quarrels. Their majority under the best of circumstances is never large. A change of two or three thousand votes would throw the State into the hands of the Democrats. For fifteen years that party have presented a united front, and each year they have succeeded to the polls thirty thousand strong. They are watchful for divisions in the ranks of their Republican opponents, and it is time that the latter realized that discord means defeat. This year the Temperance Party enters the field with a candidate of its own for Governor, and we all know from which party his votes will be taken. The Labor Reform Party threatens to do the same thing. The Republicans cannot afford to fritter away their strength in the serious contest as to which clique shall control the party in the State. Let them be wise in time, unite for an energetic canvass, and at the election in March show, by a decisive majority, that the Granite State still enthusiastically supports the Administration of President GRANT. They will inaugurate the elections of the year, and their verdict should be such as to encourage the Republicans of the States which follow them.

Years ago in England, the established Church of Ireland and imprisonment for debt were such pieces of the "Constitution" that to talk of either of them as a thing to be done away with, would have been counted as simply nonsensical. Both are now gone to the limbo of the Heptarchy and the Constitutions of CLARENDON. That "imprisonment" law had even a stronger hold on the national feeling than the other, for the people believed that imprisonment was the great security for the payment of honest debts and perhaps there may be some who still think the Rogues will now run riotous society. But the fear of change, which has usually perplexed the people much more than the monarchs, was always a weak one, and if progress and civilization mean anything—and they do mean something—the human moralities will be found to do as much as the jails—and probably something more.

The strike of ten thousand men at Creusot will add another to the many complications which at present engage the attention of the French Executive. The mines, furnaces, forges and foundries of President SCHNEIDER, which furnish employment to the inhabitants of the little town, constitute one of those vast industrial establishments which are only to be found in the coal and iron-producing districts of Europe, and whose internal disturbances are matters of national importance. A similar stoppage at Seraing in Belgium, about a year ago, threatened at one time to assume the proportions of a domestic insurrection, which was only quelled by the interference of the military, and the sacrifice of not a few lives. Whether in France, Belgium or Germany, the employes at the great iron works are the most turbulent and the worst educated part of the population. Among them may be found representatives of nearly every nationality in Europe, and their leaders are generally men who associate political and socialistic theories with very extreme doctrines regarding the rights of labor. Situated not far from the Swiss frontier, it is probable that in the present case the strikers contain a large element of foreign agitators; and unless speedily arranged, the affair may expand from the dimensions of a mere trade dispute into a difficulty of State.

We are glad to publish the letter on the "line and staff" question, to be found in another column, because its tone is dignified and its spirit honest—thereby differing, we are bound to say, from a good part of the communications which either find their way into print, or are offered as suitable for publication. The line and staff dispute is a fierce and angry one. On one side, the ideas commonly advanced are those which would, if carried out in practice, tear to shreds the whole naval system. On the other, we are too often asked to take opinion for fact, and authority for argument. Our own desire has been to do substantial justice, by such a compromise as would enable officers both of line and staff to live in harmony, and to secure the respect due to them from their men. Our correspondent is in error when he imputes to us any sympathy with disobedience to orders as a means of changing regulations complained of. On the contrary, we distinctly took ground against those breaches of discipline committed by Surgeons some time since, under the impression that they were merely "making test questions." But now that the real question has come before Congress, as to what changes shall be made in the existing regulations, we discuss it from a different point of view. We believe that the complaints of the staff have never till now received due heed; and we look confidently to the Naval Board to substitute for the existing regulations those which, without going to the extremes demanded by some of the staff, shall yet make their positions more respected and desirable, and hence better both for the country and themselves.

The American Institute—Nomination of Officers.

Last evening the members of the American Institute met at the Cooper Institute. The opening business was the reading of the report of a Committee of fifteen, appointed two weeks ago to nominate candidates for the coming election and to report on the Institute fair. The regular meeting then adjourned, and an informal meeting was called, at which it was moved and carried that a new ticket be substituted for the former. The following is the revised list:

For Vice-Presidents—Horace Greeley, Jr. Vice-Presidents—General M. Hall, Charles E. Daly, A. C. Ely. For Recording Secretary—Geo. Payton. For Corresponding Secretary—Geo. D. Phillips. For Treasurer—Spencer R. Comstock. For Managers of the Fair—Wm. H. Butler, Grover Cleveland, J. Graham Hardrick, Charles Wagner Hull, William S. Chapman, Thomas Hicks, Thomas Barker, William H. Fogg, Joseph E. Lyman, T. T. Smith, Warren Brown, Thos. B. Stetson, Simon B. Smith, A. C. Hall, Henry Gardner, A. Mahlmann, Francis Brownell, Charles H. Ford. For Committee on arts—Jasper F. Cropsey, Thos. Cole, Thos. Gilmore, Wm. H. Bruce, Jas. Jones, Charles Perry, J. Owen Brown, Stephen D. Brown. For Committee on Manufactures, Science and Agriculture—Wm. Wallace, Jr., Charles Cammeyer, Simeon Ainsworth, De Witt Clinton. For Committee on the Library—James Hamilton, Jr., Charles Cammeyer, Simeon Ainsworth, Parmelee, O. G. Hixon. For Committee on Finance—Wm. Wallace, Jr., Charles Cammeyer, Simeon Ainsworth, Albert Brown, Nathaniel Weyman, Thomas Hicks, Frank A. Stetson, G. Williams. For Committee on Manufactures and Industry—Wm. Wallace, Jr., Hamilton H. Towle, Calvin S. Emery, Robert Weir, Frank L. Fogg, H. Hubbard. For Committee on Commerce—Simeon Ainsworth, George Hardrick, B. Chandler, Dubois Dey, Francis, James G. Pohle, J. S. Newberry, Albert C. Bailey. For Committee on Chemistry—Wm. A. Graham, Jas. John Henderson, Isaac Buchanan, James Hogan. For Committee on Commerce—Thos. Godwin, Edward Wright, J. V. C. Smith, James H. Backus, John H. Macy.

Both tickets were in favor of the reelection of Mr. Gilmore as President, and differed only in the nomination of fair managers and committee members. Messrs. HOGAN, PARMELEE and BUCHANAN were appointed to get the above list printed to-day. At the next meeting it will be submitted for approval, and on Thursday, the 10th of February, 1870, the election will be held at the rooms of the Institute in the Cooper Union building. The polls will be opened

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

EUROPE.

Another South Cable Successfully Laid—The Death of Deputy Raspail Declared—The Arraignment of Rochefort.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—A new cable in the interest of the French Company, to connect England and Brest, has been successfully laid. The shore end at Salcombe, Eng., was completed last night.....A few days since it was positively and officially announced that M. RASPAIL, one of the leading members of the Radical Party in the Corps Legislatif, was dead. At 3 o'clock this afternoon the report was first contradicted, and the deputations which were on the way to Paris to attend the funeral have been notified of the facts of the case. There is much indignation expressed at the unknown author of this cruel hoax.....The Ministry has declared its intention of proposing that all offences of the Press be tried before a jury; but as this proposition cannot for some time become a law, M. ROCHEFORT, whose trial soon takes place, will not have the privilege of a jury. The Radical journals charge the Government with pressing the arraignment of the Deputy for the purpose of avoiding the operation in his case of the proposed law.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The political news to-day is meagre.....The Times this morning has an article, four columns long, reviewing Mrs. Crowe's new book on the Lord and Lady Byron matter. The writer admits the likelihood that Lady Byron was deceived by her husband's inveterate passion for mystification, and really believed him incestuous.

Proceedings of the Ecumenical Council—Position of the Freemasons of Prussia—Bismarck and Burlingame—The Italian Parliament.

ROME, Jan. 20.—The organization of the Committee on Eastern Rites and Apostolic Missions is now complete. The Committee is largely composed of Eastern prelates, but includes among its members the Bishops of Angoulême, Toronto and Burlington.....Cardinal ANTONELLI has secured the French Ambassador that the Pope will never hesitate to maintain the rights of the Church as equal to those of the State.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The Freemasons of Germany have adopted an address protesting against the tendency of the Ecumenical Council toward the doctrines of the Syllabus.....Correspondence between Mr. BURLINGAME, as chief of the Chinese Embassy, and Count VON BISMARCK is published. The Prussian Government expresses its anxiety for the restoration of the Imperial authority throughout China as the best guarantee of order and of safety for foreigners.

FLORENCE, Jan. 20.—The National Parliament is summoned by royal decree to meet on the 7th of March.

CUBA.

Ex-Secretary Seward in Havana—A Serenade—Speech of Mr. Seward—Sale of the Spanish Gunboats.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—On Tuesday evening the bands of the different Volunteer battalions in this city serenaded Governor SEWARD. Several thousand people assembled in the street in front of the hotel, and Marte square was splendidly illuminated. The officers of the Volunteers and many others entered the hotel, where Colonel ZULUETA delivered a speech of welcome, saying the serenade was a manifestation of the sentiments of the loyal Spaniards for their distinguished guest. Mr. SEWARD shook hands with all the officers, and replied briefly to the welcome. He complimented the people on the improvements they had made since his former visit to Havana. All nations, he said, were interested in the permanent peace and prosperity of Cuba. Pray God, this progress may continue, and peace and harmony be restored to the island. Referring to Spain, he expressed the hope that the political situation of the country that was the most ancient ally of America would result in a safe, happy and speedy issue. Mr. SEWARD's remarks, from beginning to end, were strictly non-committal in the matter of the insurrection.....Ten of the gunboats recently arrived from New-York have gone to sea. Their destination is unknown.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

The California Pioneers—The Chinese Question—Large Fire at San Jose, Cal.—An Earthquake—Condition of the Pacific Roads.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—The Society of California Pioneers, which proposes to erect a building suitable for the purposes of the association, has petitioned the Legislature for the use of the public square, at present occupied by the Mechanics' Institute Pavillion.....The total fall of rain for the present season is 8.44 inches, about the average of preceding years.....The heads of the principal Chinese companies have decided to make another effort to suppress the importation of Chinese women. A large number of Chinese prostitutes were arrested last night at the instance of the companies, and the matter will come before the Courts to-morrow. In the meantime, the prisoners are confined in jail.....The Chinese quarter in the town of San Jose was burned yesterday, rendering homeless about 1,000 Chinese.....A train of the California Pacific Railroad passed over the new railroad bridge across the Sacramento River, at Sacramento City, yesterday.....A sharp shock of earthquake occurred at San Bernardino, California, on the 14th inst.....The tracks of the Union and the Central Pacific Railroads have been free from snow blockades, with a single exception, this Winter. The trains are running on time, and all the connections are made promptly. Both lines are well provided with snow sheds and plows, and there is but little probability of detention of passenger or freight trains.

Minister Low on his Way to China—The Pacific Railway Sale—The Next Billiard Match for the Championship.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Ex-Governor Low, the newly-appointed Minister to China, has reached here on his way to Pekin.....It is again asserted that the Central Pacific Railroad Company has purchased the Central Pacific Road, and that the price paid was $6,000,000.....Judge MCKINSTRY has discharged the Chinese prostitutes arrested on the 15th inst., and who were brought before him on a writ of habeas corpus.....In answer to RUDOLPHE's letter in the Chicago Times of the 11th inst., DERBY proposes a game of billiards for the championship to be played in this city on the 15th of February, he paying RUDOLPHE's expenses. If this proposition is not satisfactory, the game to be played in New-York City on the 8th of April. DERBY and DION are to play a game here on Thursday for the benefit of the Roman Catholic and the Protestant Orphan Asylums. DION appears to be the favorite.....The steamer Colorado sailed for Panama to-day with 200 passengers and $1,051,000 in treasure, of which amount $41,000 is for New-York; $613,000 for England; $45,000 for France; $241,000 for Calais, and $20,000 for Panama.....Total shipments of treasure since Jan. 1, $3,365,000, including $630,700 sent to New-York by railroad.....The Superintendent of the United States Branch Mint, in this city, made thirteen changes of employes to-day—eight men and five women, including several persons who have been employed in the Mint for twelve years past.....It has rained all day throughout the State.

Late News From the Sandwich Islands—Movements of the Austrian and Japanese Embassies—A Terrible Gale.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The steamship Idaho has arrived from Honolulu. A Hawaiian Prince and the members of the Austrian Embassy to China, Japan and South America were among the passengers. Sandwich Island advices are to Jan. 4.....The Austrian frigate Donna put into Honolulu to repair extensive damage received in a cyclone in the Japan Sea.....His Majesty King KAMEHAMAHA had received the Austrian Embassy, and the usual complimentary addresses were made.....Dr. HOFFMAN had been appointed Austrian Consul at Honolulu.....The Japanese Commissioners had made their first official visit to the King, accompanied by the American Minister and his Secretary of Legation, upon which occasion the Ministers of Foreign Relations presented their credentials from the Mikado and exchanged the usual compliments.....A terrible gale had visited the islands, and all the vessels in the harbor were wrecked or dragged their anchors. The [illegible] Dykes were broken.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

The National Convention at the Capitol—Speakers and Speeches of Yesterday—Final Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Women's Suffrage Convention reassembled this morning. The hall was crowded. Among those present was Senator WILSON, who, upon being invited to address the Convention, made a short speech, in which he stated that whenever he had a vote to give it would be given to remove any burden from the people, and grant the same rights to women that men possess.

Mrs. STANTON said she was very glad the Senators were taking a position in the front ranks of the Women's Grand Army of the Republic.

Senator TIPTON was called on to address the Convention, but declined to speak. Mrs. RACHEL MOORE TOWNSEND, of Philadelphia, Mrs. PAULINE W. DAVIS, of Rhode Island, and other ladies, also spoke, all of whom have heretofore addressed the Convention.

The resolution presented on the first day's meeting in favor of a sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, providing for female suffrage, was discussed, and afterwards adopted.

EVENING SESSION.

The Convention closed its session this evening. The attendance was quite large. Rev. Mr. MAY made a speech, and afterwards Mrs. CHARLOTTE WILBOUR read an address upon the necessity of woman's elevation, in order to develop her higher and better nature, and the necessity of her acting on her own behalf. Miss ANTHONY gave a glowing account of the success which had attended woman's suffrage in Kansas. Mrs. STANTON spoke of the manner in which individuals were controlled by the Association, and showed that, as the members of the woman's family, our individual action could not be wholly independent. She urged the girls to learn some trade or profession by which they could support themselves, if necessary. In referring to the social evil she reminded the men in high places that the haunts of vice were not filled from the ranks of the poor and lowly, but from the gay and fashionable, where they had not learned to support themselves by any honorable occupation.

STATE LEGISLATURES.

Complete Ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment by Ohio and Iowa—Constitutional Amendments Added for by Kansas—Legislative Action in Other States.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 20.—At 9 o'clock tonight the House adopted the Senate resolution ratifying the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, completing Ohio's ratification thereof. The vote stood—yeas 57, nays 35. Messrs. BATES, HILL, KLEINSCHMIDT and CUNNINGHAM, Reform Republicans, voted in the affirmative. The result was received with cheers by the crowds in the galleries and lobby.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 20.—The Iowa House of Representatives to-day ratified the Fifteenth Amendment by 68 yeas to 12 nays. It was ratified by the Senate yesterday.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 20.—The Kansas Legislature yesterday adopted a resolution memorializing Congress to provide for an early apportionment of representation under the new census. A resolution was also adopted recommending the removal of the National Capital to the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 20.—A bill in the interest of holders of Tennessee bonds passed the Senate to-day and is now a law. It authorizes all railroads in debt to the State to pay the principal of their indebtedness with any legal issue of six per cent. bonds, without regard to the series or number. It is believed that this will reduce the bonded debt to $17,000,000.

The West-Convention of Colored People at St. Louis—Still Another Mississippi Steamer Lost—Relief for the Cave City Sufferers.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 20.—A convention of colored people to provide measures for the education and general welfare of that class throughout the State met at Jefferson City, yesterday. Nothing important was done beyond organizing.....A dispatch from Grand Tower, yesterday, says: "The steamer Lady Gay, bound from St. Louis to New-Orleans, was sunk at 1 o'clock this afternoon. No lives were lost. No particulars of the disaster have been received."....A meeting of working women last night took steps to establish a cooperative store.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 20.—At a meeting of citizens to-day, a large sum of money was collected for the relief of the sufferers by the tornado at Cave City.

Advices from Mexico—Affairs Unsettled and Revolutions Impending—Topic in Revolt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Mexican advices by the way of Mazatlan represent the country in an unsettled condition. Revolutions are impending in several States. The hatred of the Mexicans towards foreigners is manifested in numerous instances.....LABADA had raised an independent standard at Tepic, and called a Convention for the 15th of January to frame general laws for the government of the State.....The Mexican steamer brings $243,000 in treasure from Mazatlan.

More Reports from Paraguay—Lopez at the Head of a Large Army.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Advices from Rio Janeiro to the 31st ult. have been received here. President LOPEZ had appeared in the field again with a force of 5,000 whites and 15,000 Indians, and stopped the advance of the Brazilian troops.

Conviction of Warren Fellows.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Jan. 20.—WARREN FELLOWS has been convicted of murder in the second degree, and sentenced to twenty years hard labor in the State Prison.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 20.—ROBERT THORP, the Dutchess County farmer whose house was attacked by burglars on the night of Jan. 5, when he and his housekeeper, Miss BEST, beaten, died to-day. There is much feeling over the affair, but no Coroner's inquest has yet been held.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 20.—A destructive fire occurred in the village of Horseheads, six miles north of this city, about 4 o'clock this morning, which destroyed the extensive foundry and iron works known as the Kline Iron Works, of which Messrs. OAKLEY, CLARK & CO. were proprietors. The loss will amount to about $20,000; insured for $15,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

HARTFORD, Jan. 20.—The Republican State Convention has been called to meet in this city on Wednesday, Feb. 9.

DEATH OF GOTTSCHALK.

The steamship South America, which reached this port from Rio de Janeiro last night, brought very sad news. LOUIS MORREAU GOTTSCHALK, who intended to revisit this country in the Fall of the present year, died at Tijuca, near Rio, after a three weeks' illness, on the 18th day of December last. The simple announcement of this fact could not be supplemented at the late hour at which it was received, by any of the events of which a rehearsal will be awaited with painful interest. Few men enjoyed greater popularity, and none more numerous and cordial personal friendships than the dead pianist. His reputation was world-wide. Born in New-Orleans in 1829, he left the United States in 1851, and for four years studied music in Paris. In 1855 he recrossed the Atlantic, and in February gave his first concert in this city. His subsequent career cannot now have recapitulation. A few weeks ago his latest triumphs were reviewed in a letter from GOTTSCHALK'S own pen, and published in the TIMES. The deceased artist was a dilettante and a linguist as well as a musician, and had contributed to the Atlantic Monthly and to numerous foreign periodicals. A younger brother, and three sisters, well known in musical circles in London, survive him.

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF BROOKLYN.

The Inman steamship City of Brooklyn, which left Liverpool Jan. 4 and Queenstown Jan. 5, arrived at this port last evening, with three days' later news than was at hand by the Weser.

The death of Admiral Sir THOMAS HASLEWOOD is announced. The deceased officer, who was 81 years of age, entered the navy in 1803.

The Gaulois announces the death of Mme. GALOS, wife of the former Director of the Colonies under LOUIS PHILIPPE, and daughter of General FOY. She has been interred at Père-la-Chaise, in the grand sepulchre, the well-known work of DAVID of Angers, erected in 1826, by national subscription, to the great orator of the Liberal Party.

The Golos, of St. Petersburg, says: "We are informed that the Government had recently under consideration a proposal to authorize all Polish refugees, either during the last revolt or in previous insurrections, to return to their houses. The suggestion, after a serious deliberation, was declared to be inadmissible and untimed."

The Prussian Government has given orders for the construction of a new ironclad frigate for the North German navy in the naval establishment at Elterbeck, near Kiel. This frigate is to be called the King Frederick the Great. It is to draw twenty-four feet of water, and be provided with an engine of 800-horse power, like the ironclad the Great Elector, which is now in course of construction. The artillery equipment of the new vessel is to consist of two revolving turrets, with four rifled ten-inch guns, each weighing 460 cwt., and three twenty-four pounders, each weighing 50 cwt. The Great Elector is now being fitted out at Wilhelmshaven.

The Northdeutsche Correspondenz says: "The treaty of commerce between Austria and England was signed at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Vienna, on the 20th December, by Count DE REVEN and Lord BLOOMFIELD, English Minister. Thus this long negotiation has at length been brought to a successful result, for although the treaty has still to be submitted to the two Parliaments of Vienna and Pesth for approval, that final step is a mere formality, for the Hungarian Chambers have already given their assent, and the conditions required by the Reichsrath before voting the measure have been fulfilled by means of the obliging dispositions of the English Government."

The Government of Stockholm has just published statistical information relative to the treaties of commerce and navigation signed at Paris in 1865 between France and Sweden. Since that time the imports and exports between the two countries have almost doubled. The navigation of Sweden with France has increased since 1864 by 180 per cent, and that of Norway by 62.

The Madrid Politica of Dec. 31 makes the following announcement: "On the arrival last night of General PRIM at Madrid he found a dispatch (not telegraph) awaiting him from Señor MONTEMAR, the Spanish Ambassador to Italy, in which he explains extensively the reasons AMADEO has given for not accepting the offering of the Crown of Spain for the Duke of GENOA. The Council of Ministers of Italy have been unanimous on this point. The mother of the young Duke is also opposed to the heavy chance of ruling a people so estranged as the Spaniards are at the present moment. In these circumstances what other could a constitutional King decide? What more could Señor MONTEMAR do, who has worked this point with a perseverance and an ability worthy of a better cause? Such are in substance the contents of the dispatch of Señor MONTEMAR, and it is an amplification of the late telegrams received by the Minister of State."

A young man named GARDNER FULLER, who described himself as an American, but could not produce any proof of the fact, was tried, says Gaillgnani's Messenger, Jan. 6, at the Tribunal of Correctional Police, on numerous charges of obtaining goods under false pretences. He appears to have arrived in Paris, almost without resources, six months back, and after a brief stay at the Grand Hotel, which threatened on the presentation of his bill, he hired a warehouse in the Rue d'Enghien, and commenced business on a common scale, his principal capital at the moment being the plate on his door bearing the names of GARDNER, FULLER & CO. He then procured goods from different manufacturers, among other articles he ordered twenty velocipedes, and sold them for 200 francs each, and disposed immediately of a half score. His business operations spread over a very wide field, and extended to every branch of trade in which he could get credit; his victims including a wine-grower in the Moselle, a cordial maker in Berry, a dealer in comestibles in Paris, and a boot manufacturer at Lyons. When his creditors became clamorous, he decamped, but was soon captured. The Court sentenced him to thirteen months' imprisonment.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Question of Emigration and of Surplus Labor—Public Meeting at Exeter Hall, in London.

On the evening of Jan. 4 a crowded meeting, marked in its course by exciting incidents, was held at Exeter Hall, in London, to consider the emigration question, in connection with the large amount of surplus labor in Great Britain. Sir GEORGE GREY, K. C. B., presided, and with him on the platform were Sir James Lawrence, M. P.; Major-General Sir W. Denison, K. C. B.; Mr. W. McCullagh Torrens, M. P.; Mr. McArthur, M. P.; General Wittington, Hon. Auberon Herbert, Mr. Frederick Young, Captain Bedford Pim, the Count de G. Lasteyrie, Hon. F. S. Lelievre, (of Canada), Mr. James Coul, Mr. George Potter, Mr. D. Chinery, Mr. Edmond Beales, R. A.; Captain Goodlife, &c., and other gentlemen well known in connection with social questions.

The Chairman, who was received with loud cheers, said the question which they were met to discuss was a very great one, taken from whatever point of view they contributed that a vast and unusual amount of distress prevailed in this country, and that that distress was of a character which was now reaching portions of the population which in former times were but in a trifling degree touched by it. It was not only the duty of their rulers to the classes above them as well, which were becoming involved all together in a common calamity. Under such circumstances, it was believed that one mode by which relief could be applied to that distress was emigration. [Cries of "No!"] Those who were in favor of emigration did not hold that it was the only remedy to apply as a permanent cure to evils in this country, but they considered it would apply as an instantaneous remedy, and one which would allow public attention to be turned to other methods to give permanent and lasting relief to the distress. It was with the greatest satisfaction that he saw others and the workingmen of Great Britain themselves taking a prominent position in this matter, for the working class had addressed a petition to the Queen on the subject, to which, up to the present time, 104,000 authenticated signatures had been obtained. He enlarged advantages resulting to the working classes if they met throughout the country in proper rooms to discuss the points of emigration, for they would then become acquainted with some idea of the great Empire connected with this country. He intended to leave this country for another part of the Empire, should make up their minds not to leave the country as persons "helped out" by the hand of charity, but it was in every respect desirable that they should help themselves to enter with confidence upon their new home, both as respects the present and future, for in the future their children and children's children would feel no shame as to the manner in which their father "came out." If emigration were conducted by charitable gentlemen without the voice of the workingmen, it would be felt that emigration was a mere scheme of charity; but it would be different if a man could be placed in the position of paying herself for that which he could not now afford to pay down. He was, therefore, desirous that the workingmen themselves should take part in the management of these proposed societies for emigration, for he believed the great colonies had been raised into their greatness by workingmen from this country. Workingmen and their descendants had become eminent in the colonies, and emigrants from England would be well received by the Colonial Governments, and he was enabled to say with confidence, from an experience of thirty-three years, arising from the smallest possible beginning, that every man who deserved to succeed would in the colonies be sure of success. A man with industry would there not only be above the want of clothing, food and shelter, but he would also be able to leave to his family a sufficient property upon which the fortunes of that family might be built. He felt no hesitation in asking those of the working classes who were able to face honestly this matter of emigration to enter upon it, and they would not be asked to go to new country and to a foreign land. They would, by going hence, make room for others poorer than themselves in the walks of industry here, and they would become in no slight degree the best friends of their countrymen by creating a demand abroad for goods manufactured here. He reminded them that this was a nation whose language was being adopted over the habitable globe as the most convenient for intercourse; whose form of religion was adopted as that of the purest and best form of Christianity; whose literature was accepted as the literature of mankind; where laws were such that humanity had loved to dwell under. ("No!" and "How about Ireland?") There could be no question that our laws were respected and copied, as was proved by the fact that the United States laws were founded upon the English laws, as well as the laws of the various Colonial Governments, and the Anglo-Saxon race every where adopted these laws. It was remarkable a fact that whenever the people of other nations entered our colonies, they in a short period of time could not be distinguished from the British nation.

Sir JAS. LAWRENCE, who was warmly cheered on coming forward, said it was his privilege to move the first resolution; "That the present depressed state of trade throughout the country necessitates the removal of part of its population to such colonies as may afford them a certain means of earning a livelihood by labor." (Cry of "No," and responsive cries of "Yes," and cheers.) The motion carried with it its own argument; because no man could attempt to deny that if there were more people willing to work than work could be found for, their best policy—the best, their only policy—would be to go where the work was to be had. He then proceeded to comment upon a paragraph in the Times relative to the Emigration Commissioners, stating that the emigration of last year, and he denied that the emigration of last year was made for the sole purpose with regard to the great amount of emigration from the United Kingdom, for he declared the numbers of foreigners from other nations, who had embarked here, were added to our native emigrants to obtain those results. He thought that there had been less emigration during the last ten years up to 1868 than there was in the previous ten years up to 1858, so that there was no need for the alarm as to an exodus from the United Kingdom. Sir W. DENISON supported the resolution, which was also supported by Hon. AUBERON HERBERT. In a speech which was loudly cheered, and who called for this great Empire to be welded into one with intercommunication and conjoint interests.

A most extraordinary scene was then presented. The Chairman was about to put the motion to the meeting, when some persons with Irish names, and having an American Irish appearance, some of whom had been uttering advice cries during the speeches, demanded the right of moving an amendment. They were allowed at the end struck to turn the meeting in their favor, and had their wishes, sufficient time to make known that the purport of their amendment was to condemn emigration as being "wrong in principle," and that the Land laws should be altered, and this much having been stated the whole meeting became in an uproar, the exhortations of the Chairman and others to hear the man. A cry was raised that they were Fenians, and as they persisted in disturbing the meeting, the Police were called in amid a great uproar. At length the Chairman put the original resolution to the meeting, and it was carried almost unanimously. The malcontents then left the platform in a body upon to overwhelming a proof of their unpopularity.

Mr. M'CULLAGH TORRENS, M. P., then moved the following resolution:

"That this meeting approves the objects of the Emigration League (combining the National Aid and Land and Labor Association Societies) to urge, by various agencies, upon the Home Government the initiation of a national emigration policy in cooperation with the Governments of the colonies; to promote emigration from those districts of the United Kingdom in which prevails where distress abounds through the want of employment; to assist persons and families desirous of emigrating with advances towards their passage and outfit; to afford advice and information to intending emigrants and others; to make arrangements for their passage and for their proper reception upon their arrival in the colonies."

Mr. MARKHAM LATHAM seconded the motion, which was spoken to by Mr. GUILE, and carried unanimously.

Mr. MCARTHUR proposed:

"That a deputation be appointed by this meeting to wait upon the Prime Minister, and urge upon him the necessity of the Government assisting the League to carry out emigration to our colonies upon a large scale."

This was spoken to by several trades union leaders and others, and having passed, the proceedings closed at a very late hour.

The Colonies and the Home Government.

On Jan. 3, the colonial and continental interested in the British dependencies again met at Cannon-street, and the result of their deliberations was to agree upon a united course of action in the adoption of the resolutions which were put forward at the last meeting by Mr. BEAUMONT.

The chair was occupied by Mr. YOULE, who, in opening the proceedings, said it must be most satisfactory to all those who had set themselves the task of drawing the attention of the English public to the colonial questions which were now ripening, to see that their efforts had not been in vain. Should we not get rid of some of all military circumscription and transmission of legislative boards? Should we not also make the Ministers responsible to Parliament with regard to the colonies? The year 1870, if wisely practiced the constitution with a little sincerity, ought to give to Paris the fourteen or fifteen deputies to which the capital has a right, and also to elect its own municipal councillors. The administrators of the communes of Paris should not be nominated by the deputies of departmental circumscriptions. The year 1870, according to the programmes of the elected of 1869, ought also to deliver us from article 14, and restore to functionaries of all other divisions, that which is the possibility which is the only pledge of a sound administration. We take notice also of the savings promised us in the budget. But what we require is not merely a few trifling economies, but a severe and searching inquiry into the expenses, a prudent distribution of the national resources, allotting more millions to useful undertakings and fewer to those of a fruitless character. The mind rests also, we are told, in so promulgate for us a sound municipal law, giving to the communes all facilities for doing good, transporting the all authority into the municipal councils itself, and abolishing the tutelage. He despaired, his true aim—that of the excessive power. Moreover, 1870 is to furnish us with a real legislation on gratuitous and obligatory instruction, and that perhaps is the most essential point of all."

How Ex-Finance Minister Magne was Ousted from Office.

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News, by publishing the subjoined letters, explains the manner in which Ex-Finance Minister MAGNE was relieved of his portfolio. "The accompanying correspondence," he says, "between the ex-Minister of Finance and the new Prime Minister is authentic; and, though evidently they have exchanged other communications not publicly known, these letters throw considerable light on the situation:

M. MAGNE TO M. EMILE OLLIVIER.

JAN. 1, 1870.

MON CHER MONSIEUR OLLIVIER:—I am deeply touched by your amiable letter, and thank you for it. The foundation of the Liberal Empire is wielded for by the majority. I have worked to achieve it with conviction, and I will continue to do so, with sincerity to cooperate in the object. But it is in arduous work, and the capital point is success. Nothing should lend impetus to bring all the influences into play. Now, I learn that a hostile conversation were held yesterday between leaders of the Right Centre and Left Centre, and that arrangements might be made for a compact number of problems were to be distributed to novel. I need not add, particularly if the finance portfolio were at your disposition. Consider well what you will do, I beseech you, anything in defiance of my interests, which are quite secondary. They most sacrifice for me to the interest of the party, be to leave the rest of door. Whether far off or near, I shall always be found among the most zealous and most devoted partisans. Pardon me, dear friend.

MAGNE.

The above letter was, no doubt, indited for publicity. With all respect to M. MAGNE, I do not at all believe that he expected to maneuvre himself out of office. M. OLLIVIER, however, took him at his word, and appointed M. BUFFET Finance Minister.

On New-Year's Day M. MAGNE wrote the following letter to M. SCHNEIDER, President of the Corps Legislatif:

MY DEAR FRIEND: OLLIVIER has talked with those positions (ex machina). They want all the portfolios for themselves, with the exception of those of the Marine, Army and Interior. He has written to ask what I propose to do. Naturally I answer that he must give way to them. In withdrawing from the ministry, I cannot, however, say out of having pledged that the Finance should be left in charge of Prince Joseph Napoleon. I would rather be out of office when an intelligent situation than remain in office with a mutilated standing, and after equivocal negotiations. A thousand friendships.

P. MAGNE.

To everybody who knows Prince the expression of "Cousin Monsieur" must make it evident that M. MAGNE wrote to M. SCHNEIDER under an impulse the reverse of friendly to M. OLLIVIER's new colleagues. He never meant to go out of office, and has been jockied out of it, although the logic of the situation, which forcibly struck him, pointed to a result which escaped his penetration.

RUSSIA.

From la Phare de la Loire.

Letters from St. Petersburg state that a vast conspiracy has been discovered against the life of the Czar. The centre of action of the conspirators was the City of Odessa. The pupils of the University Pastch and Yeremichev are principally implicated. In order to carry out their object the conspirators had resolved to tear up the rails at the line during the journey of the Emperor from Odessa to St. Petersburg; but the rigorous surveillance exercised over the whole line the Czar was to use prevented them from executing their project. The Police did not even suspect that the rails had been removed by such dangerous conspirators. This offence was imputed to the peasants of the neighborhood, who, when in want of iron, have recourse to robbery in order to obtain it. The most rigorous surveillance is powerless to repress this kind of theft, and this deplorable cupidity of the ignorant peasantry expresses the lives of the travelers who use the line from Baltic Odessa to great danger. The conspirators arrested belong without exception to the Russian nationality. A large number of books, pamphlets and revolutionary proclamations emanating from Russian printing offices abroad, were found in their possession. The Pastch and Yeremichev families, that no Pole was affiliated to the conspiracy, although the Polish nationality is represented by a large number of young men at the University of Odessa. The Police have also discovered a conspiracy at St. Petersburg. Several young men are accused of having disseminated revolutionary proclamations. It appears, however, that this second conspiracy is a mere childish affair, and the young people mixed up in it will be tried in public. Lists of proscriptions, upon which figures, among others, M. KATKOFF, the famous editor of the Moscow Gazette, have been found in the hands of the Government of the Czar is anxious to ascertain whether these plots were fomented by the Russian exiles in Switzerland. The conspiracy, ramifications of which were discovered at Moscow and St. Petersburg, has nothing in common with the Odessa plot.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Season at the Olympic.

As we anticipated, Mr. G. L. FOX's performances in "Paul Pry" and in "Robert Macaire" have attracted immense audiences to the Olympic Theatre. We now learn that in a few nights that excellent comedian will act Amintiab Slack, in "The Serious Family," and dapper Captain Shortcut in "The Spitfire." After these pieces shall have had their run, Mr. FOX will represent Hamlet in a fresh tragedy by an American author. The new pantomime will be produced subsequently.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Out of considerations that seem to us altogether judicious, the ball which had been contemplated for Jan. 31, in aid of the American Dramatic Fund, is postponed.....Miss KATE FIELD is to lecture at Irving Hall, on Saturday, the 22d, her subject being "Among the Adirondacks." The entertainment is offered under the auspices of "Post Pill Kearney," No. 8, and the proceeds are to be given to the Fund for the Relief of Disabled Soldiers and Sailors.....Mlle OLIMPA F. NORRIS, who tried with success at the Union League Theatre, on Wednesday, repeats her performances at the same house to-night.....The Amateur Concert to have been given by Mme. ADELE VARONA and other ladies, in aid of suffering Cuban families, occurs (after postponement) Saturday.....The Artist Society sing "Der Freischutz" at the Academy of Music to-night.

WESTCHESTER TAXATION.

The Trustees of the Town of West Farms—Their Statement of the Situation—Memorial Sent to the Legislature.

There is, in the Tenth ward of the City of New-York, a difficulty relating to Westchester County as to the collection of taxes in that county, and the Courts have been invoked to determine the legality of the questions in dispute. So far as we are able to ascertain, the condition of affairs is simply this: The town of West Farms, in addition to its other taxes, has to provide for raising this year the sum of $87,100 for the opening and laying out of Morris-avenue, and the sum for the opening and laying out of Boston-avenue, both of which thoroughfares run through the town, one on the east and the other on the west of Central-avenue. Both were opened by order of the Legislature, in accordance with acts passed in 1868 and 1869. By the provisions of those acts the Board of Town Auditors, composed of the Supervisor, the Town Clerk and four Justices of the Peace, are required to take measures to raise the money for the improvements. Accordingly they met last year and made up the tax rolls, taking into consideration among other expenses, to be levied the amount of $87,100 and $20,000, which was added to. The average tax upon each property holder, including his proportion of the improvements, is $6 on each $1,000 worth of real estate. Excluding the proportionate tax for those, however, it would be $5.50 on every $1,000 worth of property. The objection to the tax raised by a party, of which Hon. John B. Haskin is the acknowledged leader, is that the average assessments, each year, seem to be collected this year, as the taxes are always nearly uncollect[illegible]. It is contended also by Mr. Haskin and his friends that the new expenses are not necessary, and that, at all events, before the assessments are laid therefor, the Town Auditors should have called a general meeting of the citizens, and that the amount to be raised in payment for the improvements. The Supervisors, on the other hand, claim that they are not vested with discretionary power in the premises at all; that they are simply inferior officers, bound to carry out the provisions of the enactments of the Legislature, their superior; that the special taxes in question depend absolutely their duty to be simply to make provision for levying the tax according to the sum declared by the Commissioners for the improvement to be necessary for liquidating the expenses of the work; that they have no power, under the law, to alter the tax rolls, when they have once been prepared; and, finally, that they cannot permit the collection of the tax to any future year. Mr. Haskin, on behalf of the dissentients, sued out an injunction before Hon. Judge Taffan, of the Supreme Court, who is reported to be his law partner, and who holds a seat in the town of West Farms, restraining the Supervisor of Tremont from collecting the sum levied for the improvements in question. Yesterday an argument in relation to dissolving this injunction was heard by Judge Taffan, a few days since, and a decision with regard to it will be made at an early day. The majority of the inhabitants of West Farms side with the town authorities, and [illegible] Mr. Haskin's course as having brought the issue before a Judge who is one of the parties interested, and with whom he holds such peculiarly confidential relations. In order to prevent the occurrence of any similar difficulty in future, the town authorities yesterday transmitted to the Assemblymen and the Senator from Westchester a memorial, of which the following is a copy:

WEST FARMS, Jan. 10, 1870.

We, the undersigned, members of the Board of Town Officers of the town of West Farms, respectfully request your joint action in bill pending for the laying out of new roads in said town of West Farms, the Assembly without first making a copy of said bill to the Supervisor of the town, that it may receive proper consideration. Respectfully,

FRED. GROTE, Supervisor.
FERDINAND WEBER, Town Clerk.
E. M. FURDY, Justice of the Peace.
W. G. LENT, Justice of the Peace.
D. R. SHIELS, Justice of the Peace.
PETER R. DURHAM, Justice of the Peace.

The One Cent Ferriage on Brooklyn Bridge—New Stock is Distributed.

MR. CYRUS P. SMITH adheres to the idea that the Union Ferry Company is a popular benevolent institution, and as he is Managing Director of the Company, a good deal of importance attaches to his expression of opinion on the subject. He gives the following figures for 1869:

Total receipts from five ferries	$664,000
Total expenses, including 10 per cent. dividend	575,000
Profits for the year	$89,000

Notwithstanding this exhibit, it is utterly impossible to obtain a single share, or any number of shares, of the Union Ferry stock. Every stockholder claims to be absolutely satisfied with the return they get for their investment. One such has ventilated the fact that without solicitation on his part, his stock was doubled—"watered," so that he received a double dividend upon his original stock instead of the usual 10 dividend as set forth in the resolution of the Company. This Ferry stockholder happened not only to have received two percentages, but to have been blessed, by good management, with a voluntary increase of their stock, the capital and interest having been paid by the people crossing the river, at from one cent to half a cent. Such Mr. Smith, Mr. Beach, Mr. Low, Mr. Gilmore would pay for the Company's property, which consists of seventeen boats, the ferry houses, the racks and slips; that any person can have them by paying for them, and run the ferries at one cent, but the Union Company cannot and will not; but to hold it is to be the purpose of their answer to Mayor HALL.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The proposed sale of leases of Trinity School lots at the Exchange yesterday by A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co., was not successful. Leases for three terms of twenty-one years each were offered at a fixed rental, bids being asked for a bonus on each lot. The rents specified as follows: One lot southwest corner of Seventy-ninth-street and First-avenue, $100; sixteen lots on Seventy-ninth-street, one each: northwest corner of Eightieth-street and First-avenue, $100; two lots on the avenue, adjoining this last, $125 each; twenty-three lots on Eightieth-street, $175 each; northeast corner of Eightieth-street and First-avenue, $200; four lots adjoining this last, $225. After every one had nearly an hour in endeavoring to obtain bids for these leases, Mr. BLEECKER abandoned the sale, having disposed of only five lots, viz.: the northwest corner of Eightieth-street and First-avenue, at a bonus of $25, and four lots on Seventy-ninth-street, at a bonus of $25 each.

A single Fifty-foot lot, above Eightieth-street, was sold by E. A. LAWRENCE, under the direction of the Supreme Court, and brought $18,000. It was stated that the same lot sold one year ago for $19,000.

TRUSTEES:

J. EDGAR THOMSON, President Pennsylvania Railroad Company.
CHAS. L. FROST, President Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw Railroad Company.

These bonds, at present price of gold, yield over nine per cent. income, and as an investment they are fully as secure as United States Five-twenties, which now pay only 7 and one-fourth per cent. in currency.

They are only issued when each section of the road is laid on the same is completed and equipped. Over 50 miles are now in operation, and the remainder of the line is rapidly progressing towards completion.

The State of Iowa, through which this road runs, is one of the richest agricultural sections in America. Its large production, coupled with surprising rapidity, and the immense yield of grain, pork, wool and [illegible] in the United States, create a large business for the transportation of this road. Which affords the best security, since the traffic must increase in proportion to the growth of the country, which is the most rapidly progressive portion of the State.

The road also runs through the rich and growing State of Minnesota. Reference to the map of the United States will show that it traverses a portion of the country of great richness, lying to the West, and forms one of the great Rail lines to connect communication with New-York, Chicago and St. Louis, being the shortest and most direct route from the East to the all-rail portion of the State of Minnesota, and also the nearest route from Central and Southern Iowa.

The road is opened for local traffic in rapidity as constructed, and thus RECEIVES EARNINGS ON ITS COMPLETED SECTIONS GREATLY IN EXCESS OF ANY AMOUNT NEEDED TO PAY THE INTEREST UPON ITS BONDS BEFORE THE ROAD IS FINISHED. The super of these bonds is therefore guaranteed, for if the road was already to extensions the earnings of the road are all ready to meet coupons, and yet has not to risk any of the contingencies which always attend the opening of roads in a new and unsettled country.

A long experience has shown these bonds to be a safe and secure investment.

After a thorough investigation of the above subject, we recommend these bonds as a first-class investment, offering absolute safety, and paying an unusually liberal rate of interest. All marketable securities at their full price, free of commission and express charges, in exchange for these. Pamphlets and maps furnished on application.

BUENOS AYRES, Saturday, Jan. 15, 1870.

There seems to be, at least, an appearance of peace, so far as the power of Lopez is concerned. The Argentine troops are daily expected in Buenos Ayres, where preparations are being made to receive them with rockets, music, balls and similar splendor. The Oriental Republic's forces are also on their way back, though out of the 5,000 which left at various times for Paraguay, only probably not over as many hundred will return, and the Brazilian troops will shortly leave, at least the greater number; a few ironclads being left in the river, and a small force in Assuncion will probably constitute all the forces left. General Osorio has already left headquarters; the Count D'Eu, and Minister Paranhos, are under marching orders, though the two latter are expected to stay a short time in this city before leaving for Rio Janeiro.

According to the report of a deserter from Lopez it appeared that he, Lopez, made a treaty with the Chaguay Indians, before leaving San Estanislao for Cuayguay, by which they agreed to furnish him with 12,000 men and provisions. This report seems false, and though Lopez may obtain certain aid from some of the savage tribes, and by this means be enabled to carry on a guerilla warfare for months, still there does not appear to be the ghost of a chance of his being ever able to regain what he has lost, since last accounts state he has been driven almost, if not entirely off Paraguayan soil, accompanied by his faithful Generals Caballero and Resquin and who by about 1,000 men, to the other side of the River Manbecarr. The active movements of the past fortnight are few, yet they demonstrate how completely Lopez has been annihilated. On the 19th ult. Colonel Mello attacked and defeated a force of about 200 men under Major Franco at the Arroyo Guasu (Guazu?) capturing about fifty horses, and rescuing several families. This, taken in conjunction with an official dispatch of the Count D'Eu, dated the 20th ult., giving accounts of further movements, appears to indicate that Lopez cannot have any large number of troops. From this dispatch it appears that after the enemy's defeat at Zejui Guazu, the Eleventh Battalion followed his forces to the River Sejunie, over which there was a bridge; crossing this, the enemy partly destroyed it and proceeded to intrench themselves on the opposite side, though closely pursued by Colonel Fidelis, who drove the Paraguayans further back to Ignatinje. Two miles further on, at Stamara, machines for manufacturing gunpowder were discovered and destroyed. In this expedition several hundred families were rescued, and Colonel Fidelis reported sounds of artillery to have been heard, they leading to the supposition that General Caballero's force had also attacked the enemy further north, with what result is not yet known; but as Caballero advancing, or at least ought to be, by way of Concepcion, this may be true. Deserters state Lopez to be living as a common soldier, enduring his due share of hardship and misery with the rest; all his troops are half starved, their rations being one ox to 200 men. The few men he has, as also Lopez himself, are said to be suffering greatly from the innumerable insects which abound in the Sierras.

A rather unfortunate "row" has taken place between the Provisional Government at Asuncion, and the Italian Consul. The facts are these: The Consul being accused of appropriating certain moneys, jewels, &c., placed under his charge by Italian subjects while Lopez was in power at Asuncion, thought his wisest course would be to leave. With this intent he took refuge on board the Italian gunboat Ardita, and while there endeavored to ship some half a dozen boxes on a river steamer carrying the Italian flag. The Port Captain seized several while in the act of shipment; but while attempting the seizure of two more his boat was attacked by an armed crew from the Ardita and driven off. An order was then issued prohibiting the sailing of the Tenasse, but it sailed nevertheless—the protest sent by the Provisional Government to the Ardita's commander, being returned unopened. An "indignation meeting" was held by the "Triumvirate" at once, and thus the matter stands. Commercial news is unchanged, prices tending upwards; wool and produce sustaining themselves at same prices. Lumber is just now not wanted, the supply being enough to cram all the yards in the city, and several more vessels are expected.

PICKUNE.

THE TORNADO IN KENTUCKY.

Vivid Description of the Terrible Scenes at Cave City—Houses Blown Away like Wisps of Straw—Eleven Persons Killed and Many Wounded.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette.

CAVE CITY, Ky., Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1870.

Full particulars of the doings of the tornado which cut off and demolished nearly one-third of this little town, yesterday morning, will never be known. The storm had a beginning and an end, and the end was not more than two minutes later than the beginning; but a description of the scene during those two minutes of the sad havoc which was the result of the storm, can have no beginning, and can never be made complete.

Professor A. T. Williams, one of the sufferers, says he awoke about 5 o'clock by the heavy fall of hail which beat against and demolished the windows of his house. The hail shower continued but a moment, and immediately upon the cessation of the hail storm there was a long, continuous sheet of flame making a most powerful light, which continued but another moment. He then heard the approaching wind storm and anticipated the danger, but thought his house, which was strongly built, would withstand the storm, but he prepared himself for the worst results. His wife, having become alarmed, made an effort to get out of the house, but Professor Williams caught her and threw her upon the bed and prevented her from going out. The house stood the first attack bravely, but it was afterwards picked up by the storm, lifted from its foundations and turned completely round in the air two or three times before being partially unroofed and demolished. There were unmistakable evidences of this fact, besides the impressions of Professor Williams and other inmates of the house. Several persons were sleeping in the house at the time. Those who were sleeping in the back part of the house were found in front of where the house stood. Professor Williams had deposited his clothing on a chair in his bedroom on retiring. His pants were found hanging upon a stake half a mile west of the site of the house; his coat was found three-fourths of a mile in an eastward direction, and the vest was found nearly two miles west of the house.

Mr. Williams and wife were separated and covered with debris, he insensible, and both of them hurt, but not badly. He regained consciousness soon, and began to collect the scattered fragments of his family, and found that none were in immediate danger. The most terrible rain storm immediately followed the wind and lightning. No words can portray an idea of the scene. Those who had witnessed the most terrifying battle scenes say they never saw or heard, or felt, or conceived of anything so perfectly hideous and terrifying as the howling of the winds, the vivid flashes of lightning, the crashing of houses, the drenching rain, the heartrending shrieks and piteous wailings of the terrified and the wounded, the whole of which occurred in two minutes, or probably less time. The wind shrieked, screamed, howled and roared. By the occasional flashes of lightning, it could be seen that the air was filled with flying trees, timber, houses, fragments of houses, stables, and buildings of all kinds, furniture, stoves and cooking utensils, clothing, bedding, animals, fowls and every conceivable thing, animate and inanimate, that came within the range of the storm. If the wind had a focus it was that of a heavy, angry cloud, which swept the earth and tore everything it touched from its fixed place. The storm was quick and terrific, but the noise of the breaking houses was music compared with the bellowing winds that preceded it. The destruction was complete. About fifty houses were demolished, and there is not so be found a portion of a building, a piece of furniture, an article of jewelry, and article of clothing or bedding, a board or a piece of wood of any kind that is worth the sum of fifty cents. The remains of the houses may serve for firewood, the broken pieces of furniture for kindling, the clothing and bedding for old rags; but there is nothing left within a mile and a half of a half mile in width, and extending at least twelve or fifteen miles in length, except in two or three singular instances, that it is worth a farthing to cover with rags, in the way it was originally scattered. Professor Williams had a large library, worth thousands of dollars, of which not a single book had been found that can ever be used again. A single cup and a solitary plate is all that has been found of the work of chinaware belonging to him. The only insurance heard of is on the house of Professor Williams, and this was by a worthless Company.

The total loss can never be estimated. It is enough to know that several hundred persons are homeless, without clothing or food, except such as they have received from kind-hearted citizens. Most of the destitute are poor, and unable to purchase clothing or furniture, or even food, even if they could find houses to live in. Efforts will be taken to their narrow homes to-day. It is indeed wonderful that this number is so small. How any creature could exist in that stream and survive is a mystery beyond the comprehension of even those who were in the thickest of it. Many of the survivors were terribly lacerated and bruised by the flying splinters and timbers, and some of the dead were shockingly crushed and mangled.

The following are the names of the killed and wounded, as far as ascertained: George W. Bagwell, wife and child; Miss Margaret Scarewise of J. W. Sherrill; Andrew J. Davidson, John S. McCown and child; Mrs. Dr. Jack Y. Wilson, a child of Mr. Fitz at Prewell's Knob, and two persons named Vaughan. These are all of the dead. Mr. Fitz reported dead, yesterday, is not in a hopeless condition this morning. Another child of his will probably die.

Dangerously Wounded—J. W. Sherrill, son of Colonel Robert Sherrill, of Hart County; Joseph H. Brown, skull terribly crushed; Joseph H. Foster, injured on the head, insensible; Miss Mattie Drane, Miss P. Neville, D. McKinnie and wife, Dr. J. Y. Wilson, J. Edwards and W. Parrish.

Severely Wounded—Miss Susan Hana is wounded severely, but will likely recover. Mrs. G. W. Neville and daughter, badly injured. Mrs. Neville's injuries are internal, and of a serious character. The little girl's frontal bone is cloven, and the brain is exuding. She is rational, and may recover.

Several persons were slightly wounded, and the wounds of some, which now seem to be slight, may prove serious.

THE LOSS OF THE METEOR.

She is Cast Ashore—Rescued in a Tent by the Shipwrecked Party and Their Guests.

The Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel of Tuesday publishes the following extracts from a private letter from the United States Consul at Tunis, Africa, dated Dec. 17, 1869, and giving an account of the disaster to the yacht Meteor, although no mention is made of her being blown up:

I have written to you about the yacht Meteor, owned and commanded by Mr. Geo. T. Lorillard, of New-York. She came here from Algiers the 24th of November, and sailed the 2d inst. for Malta, where she arrived in fourteen hours, a distance of 300 miles. She sailed from Malta on the 10th inst., and on the 13th was cast ashore on Cape Zee, about fifty miles from here by water, and eighty by land. Lorillard sent me a messenger, overland, who was forty hours on the road, and I wonder that he got here at all, considering the country he had to pass. I got Lorillard up soon after the wreck, that all hands were saved; but that there was chance of saving the Meteor, and asking assistance. I immediately telegraphed to the Galetta to charter a small English steamer, then in port, and at P. M. I was under weigh in her for the scene of the disaster. My wife and another lady accompanied me.

We had a pleasant sail down the bay and round Cape Bon. The sea was smooth, luckily—for at this season we have generally boisterous weather—and, as a bright moon was shining, we had a good view of the bold headland of Cape Bon, rising abruptly from the sea to a height of 1,000 feet. After rounding the Cape, passing almost within a stone's throw of it, we saw a wide reach of sandy beach, with low land in the background. After firing several guns, some rockets, and burning some blue lights, we were responded to from the shore by bonfires, and in a few minutes we were lying close near the wreck. It was now 8 P. M. I put into a barge with Captain Ryder, of the Leopold, the steamer I had chartered, to see if landing through the surf without the Medusa was practicable. We got on shore without difficulty, and found Mr. Lorillard and his friend Parran Bonneson, of New-York, with all the officers and crew. They were, as you may imagine, delighted to see us. I sent Ryder back for the ladies and some other persons I had brought with me.

The Meteor, I was surprised to find, was lying on the beach, apparently quite uninjured. Soon after she struck the sands she commenced, and heard of her going to pieces, as Lorillard feared she would, she passed through the hammering of the waves unscathed. Her masts were standing, but all her sails, spars, and work above deck had been cut away. They had erected a tent with the sails, and looked extremely comfortable in every respect, particularly about 10 o'clock, when we sat round a table as well served and as elegantly as in any gentleman's dining room.

They had got all their stores on shore, together with the sailor chest, dog and mate about to land on Friday, but the mate, by the accident, was lit up with sandwiches, and the table covered with snow-white damask, a service of solid silver and beautiful cut glass. We sat down to all the delicacies of the season, Jewett drank down with Moselle, Rhine wine, Burgundy, Bordeaux, and champagne, after which the finest of cigars; all this on a wild sand beach on the coast of Africa, with savage-looking Bedouins peering around. I do not think that there ever was a wreck made under circumstances so singularly contrasting; certainly not in Africa.

Lorillard maintained strict discipline, had sentinels posted and prevented straggling. The Arabs, he said, had behaved well and had offered no molestation. I spoke to their chief and ordered him to keep his people off, and keep his men in order, under pain of confiscation if I heard any complaint. He promised faithfully to do all in his power to maintain order. Lorillard made arrangements with Ryder to get the necessary materials, implements and men, to get the schooner off, and at 2:30 A. M. we were again on board and on our way back to the Galetta, where we landed at 5 A. M., and at 7:30 were home. If the weather continues as it has been for the last six or seven days, they may succeed in getting the Meteor off. But it may at any moment change, and if the wind comes round to the eastward, I fear that it will be all up with her. The present weather is exceptionally fine, and I feel more, much more, hopeful of a signal breaking up. The Meteor was lost, I think, through gross carelessness, for she went ashore in the weather, though misty, with a light wind from the southeast, and consequently fair.

Lorillard had changed his sailing master at Corvos, where he discharged the American and took an Englishman who was quite inexperienced with the navigation of the Mediterranean. Cape Bon is very dangerous, and is called by the Arabs, Cape Treacherous. Every Winter there are numerous wrecks on it.

The Meteor is certainly the finest and most splendid specimen of naval architecture that I have ever seen, in a vessel of her size. I believe I have told you in a former letter of Lorillard's challenge to the yachts of England to race for any sum from $4,000 to a silver cup, and for any distance from 3,000 to twenty miles, and against any yacht in the world, or class, being entered against him. He hopes to get his vessel to Malta and repair her there, and still have his race next Spring. The modeller and builder of the Meteor, Mr. Fish, is on board of her, and will superintend the repairs.

Verdict Against the Erie Railroad Company.

In the Supreme Court, at Hudson City, yesterday, a verdict was entered by consent of counsel for $11,800 against the Erie Railway Company adv. Wm. H. Woods. The claim, originally for about $12,000 was for labor and material supplied by the plaintiff in the erection of the ferry slips at the foot of Twenty-third-street, in this City, and on the erection of car boats for the Company.

Exhibition of Water-Color Paintings.

The private view of the third annual exhibition of water-color paintings took place at the Academy of Design last evening. A large number of our leading artists and literary men were present. The exhibition comprises some 300 paintings, the most of which are of more than average merit, and are a decided improvement on those of last year. As catalogues have not yet been prepared, a notice of the pictures in detail must be deferred for the present.

Brooklyn, E. D., Industrial School.

The Industrial School Association of Brooklyn, E. D., gave a reception in their new house, in South Third-street, near Fourth, last evening. There was a large and apparently fashionable attendance of ladies and gentlemen, who made themselves memorable instructors in showing that a better place for the poor to find something good to eat would be difficult to find. The parlors and upper chambers were brilliantly lighted and adorned with the national emblems. The schoolroom in which the children are taught during the day is in the basement, where the air is hardly so free as fresh as for good health in the poor, but the children are poor and nursed to swim the humors of a cheap basement, so, for the present, it may be said that they have the best part of the house. There are sixty lady managers, all of whom appear to vie with each other for supremacy in working. The objects of the institution are to provide food for the children of the extreme poor, without taking them from their parents; to provide a place where poor workingwomen can leave their children while they are at work; to feed, clothe and instruct children; to give shelter to the poor women and children who have no homes but such as they find in Station Houses, and to take cognizance of other cases which the Police may call their attention to. The ladies have purchased a large quantity of furniture for kindling the clothing and bedding for the poor; but there is nothing left within a half a mile of a half mile in width, and extending at least twelve or fifteen miles in length, except in two or three singular instances, that it is worth a farthing to cover with rags, in the way it was originally scattered. LABOR MOVEMENTS.

Strike of Shoemakers in Williamsburg.

The employes of Mr. Steinmetzler, who is engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes at No. 116 Bush-street, Williamsburg, determined on a strike yesterday morning, in compliance with an order of Lodge No. 189 of the Knights of St. Crispin, of which they were members, but, their demands being at once complied with, resumed work before the day was over. Their grievance appears to have been that their employers took work from contractors for the public institutions for making shoes, and handed it over to them to do at a reduction of two cents a pair on the price which he was himself to receive. When the strike was announced Mr. Steinmetzler sent the work back to the contractors and found other employment for his men.

Plasterers' Strike.

The strike ordered by the Operative Plasterers' Association of Brooklyn, to take place yesterday, went into effect at the time ordered, and resulted in the immediate "caving in" of the bosses. The Scotsmen of Williamsburg, Hunter's Point and Greenpoint, who have been on the strike, still hold out against the reduction, fully determined not to recede from their previous demand of $5 per diem.

The Northwestern Dispensary—Election of Officers.

The managers of the Northwestern Dispensary met last evening at their new building, corner of West Thirty-sixth-street and Ninth-avenue, a description of which was published in yesterday morning's Tribune, to organize the Board and elect its officers. The following gentlemen were chosen officers of the Board: Amos Maynard Lyon, President; Martin E. Greene, First Vice-President; Simeon C. Ingraham, Jr., Second Vice-President; Samuel Treasurer; Robert H. Brown, Secretary. After the election, a paper was read by one of the Board welcoming the visitors and patrons of the institution, and showing that the new building and property cost $80,000, of which $60,000 incumbrance, and that Mr. Hickox, the architect, yet remained to be cleared off, and that the hall above had been rented at $6,000 a year, on a lease of three years, for the use of the Broadway Tabernacle, as a Mission Sunday School. When the formal opening was concluded, the visitors partook of an elegant collation provided by the Board.

Navy Yard Intelligence.

The Swatara, which was to have left in a short time for China, is ordered, after she shall have brought drafts of men from Aspinwall, to make another trip to Savannah, and from there to carry a large draft of seamen to San Domingo. The Saratoga is to accompany the Swatara as a consort.

Major John Porter Hoffman has been ordered to the command of the marines on board the Guard, of the Isthmus of Darien squadron. He is succeeded by Lieutenants Murrell, Goodwill and Allen.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

At an early hour yesterday morning a fire broke out in the shoe shop of Henry Ferber, No. 197½ Laurens-street. The building, a one-story frame, was almost totally destroyed, and the flames spread to similar structures adjoining—one occupied by the grocery of Seni Rotz, and the other by the policy shop of William Pasnow. The flames also reached the rear of the boarding house of Mrs. Seaman, No. 198 Bleecker-street, doing a damage there of $500, fully covered by insurance. The three Laurens-street buildings, owned by Thomas Gilmore, were damaged to the extent of $2,000, and are fully insured. The loss of Ferber is estimated at $700, insured for $600 in the Astor; Seni Rotz's loss is put at $600, and she is insured for $600 in the Continental; Pasnow's loss was trivial, and he had no insurance.

A patent railway car has been making trips up and down Second-avenue during the few days. The principle on which it acts is that of a reversed railway—the track being affixed to the body of the car instead of being permanently laid down in the street. Instead of wheels, it has feet, which move on an endless chain, as it is drawn over the slippery sands upon which remain stationary when not drawn. The car moves until they are in their place on top, and draws over the elliptical drum, and others are put down in their place. All the machinery of the car is beneath the seats on either side. The principle by which the car is moved, it is claimed, is equally applicable to steam cultivators and to dredges for rivers and harbors.
